Mail Strike, Weather Pose Vote Barriers

★

Few Set For Big Campaign

None of the eight island constituencies has a full slate of candidates and some have no declared candidates at all, except for incumbent MLAs.

The appointment of a commission of inquiry into the redistribution of electoral boundaries in the province caused many riding committees to delay their nomination meetings until after any changes were made in the constituency boundaries.

There will be at least a four-way race for two Social Credit nominations in the city of Victoria.

City alderman Bob Ellis today confirmed the "lively rumor" he will be seeking the nomination is true. Ellis said he would make "an official declaration in a day or two."

Incumbent SC MLA Newell Morrison confirmed he will be seeking renomination. Businessman Ian Rendle and lawyer George Jones earlier declared their intentions of seeking the Socred nominations in Victoria.

Morrison said the nomination meeting will be held at 7 p.m., Nov. 18 at the McPherson Playhouse with former attorney-general Robert Bonner acting as chairman.

"We know it's a little late," Morrison said, "But we didn't want to confuse people. By that time the municipal elections (Nov. 15) will be over."

Gordon Hanson, a 32-year-old administrative assistant in the consumer services Department, announced today he will seek the NDP nomination at a meeting likely to be held next week.

Hanson said he expects three or four other people will also seek the nomination. Community worker Charles Barber has long been considered a possible nominee.

Mayor Peter Pollen said he has thought of the possibility of running for every party and

All four B.C. political parties shifted into election planning Monday in the face of two major stumbling blocks.

The postal strike will make campaigning tough and December weather will make voting difficult in outlying districts.

"It's an incredible political blunder," said Social Credit party president Peter Hyndman.

"What a way to run a government and what a way to call an election," he said. "Who but Barrett would call an election during a postal strike and who but Barrett would call the latest election so people will have to trudge through snow and rain and sleet?"

The Dec. 11 election will be the latest ever in B.C. history.

But Hyndman, who said he will definitely not run himself although he would like to be a candidate, said the Socreds' election machinery is ready.

Only one candidate — Rafe Mair in Kamloops — has been nominated so far but Hyndman said more meetings will take place this week and 55 candidates should be elected within two weeks.

Preliminary work on advertising has been done but Hyndman said the party has not decided how much to spend.

Opposition leader Bill Bennett said in Kelowna that Barrett called the election out of fear of the NDP record while in office.

He said the government has depleted the B.C. treasury and brought about heavy unemployment.

Bennett said he welcomed the election, but said it is unfortunate that electoral redistribution has not already taken place.

"I predict that the people of this province are not prepared to be fooled anymore," he said. "The people are ready for honesty, they are ready for sincerity, they are prepared to have it told like it is.

"I predict that our party will be elected with a strong majority government which will be needed in the difficult times ahead."

The Socreds, with 55,000 members, will rely on individual contact by door-to-door canvassers, said Hyndman.

NDP president Yvonne Cocke was less surprised by the announcement but said the party's advertising campaign has not been worked out.

The postal strike will be a problem, she said, and the winter election will mean all four parties will have to work on getting people out to vote.

But Cocke said she didn't think the late date will mean more people will be disenfranchised because the usual August-September elections always disenfranchise a large segment of people on holidays or working away for the summer.

"I will predict that we will come out with a victory, although with a slightly reduced majority," she said.

Mrs. Cocke, wife of Health Minister Dennis Cocke, said the party is "as ready as it has ever been" to fight an election.

"There may be a shifting of vote," she said. "I think we are doing very well in the rural areas."

40 Booths For Vote Registration

Forty registration booths will be set up in the Greater Victoria area for electors to get on the voters' list for the provincial election before the Wednesday, Nov. 12 deadline.

Location of the 40 booths should be ready for publication in the Times Wednesday evening and it will be up to all electors to ensure they are registered.

Between 75 and 80 per cent of voters in the province are already properly registered but anyone who has moved into a constituency or become eligible to vote since the 1972 provincial election will not be on the list.

Those people will have to make their own arrangements to go to a registration desk before next Wednesday.

The 40 booths will cover electors in the Victoria, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Saanich and the Islands constituencies.

Postal Talks Down to Cash

OTTAWA (CP) — Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey said today that all but monetary issues have been resolved following an all-night session of talks between the union and post office.

The talks were adjourned at about 5:30 a.m. EST and were to continue at 2:30 p.m. today.

The postmaster-general said he was pleased with the results of Monday night's meeting, but added:

"I don't want to make any predictions — we're still a far way from a settlement."

Both Mackasey and Jean-Claude Parrot, the chief negotiator for the 22,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW), had appeared optimistic when they entered the night bargaining session at about 10 p.m.

Mackasey had said, on leaving for a short recess just before 1 a.m. that the session he had just left was "the most fruitful two hours I've enjoyed in a long time."

The night session was the third of the day.

Some observers believed the so-called casual clause was the only one really remaining to be settled in detail, along with the issue of electronic surveillance.

Both sides already had agreed in principle the use of casual labor is necessary for smooth post office operation at certain times. What had to be settled was when those times would be and under what conditions casual workers would be employed.

The money issue is relatively clear cut.

Mackasey has maintained since well before the strike started 15 days ago that there is no more money available than the $1.70-an-hour increase recommended in the conciliation report brought down by Judge Jean Moisan of the Quebec Superior Court.

About 30 CUPW rushed in at 8:30 a.m. and took over the Western post office headquarters as part of a continuing dispute over non-receipt of last month's pay cheques. They want the cheques made available on neutral grounds.

In Montreal, a spokesman for the 4,500 striking postal workers said they have organized an intra-city mail delivery service to compensate for the loss of regular service.

Letters will be hand-delivered anywhere on Montreal Island for $1.25 each, said Guy Senecal, vice-president of the Montreal local.

But in Halifax, striking CUPW members heckled police and unemployed letter carriers today as a new courier service began its second day of operation.

"We're here to protect the CUPW workers from scab courier services," said Darrell Tingley, Atlantic representative of the CUPW, which has been on strike against the post office for three weeks.

ANGRY INSIDE workers picket interim mail service set up Monday in Halifax by out of work letter carriers. Protest finally forced cancellation of the scheme only hours after it went into effect.

CTC Slashes B.C. Tel Bid

OTTAWA (CP) — Applying the full weight of the government's new anti-inflation guides, the Canadian transport commission cut $6.7 million Monday from a British Columbia Telephone Co. request for higher revenues.

The decision reduced by 28 per cent the company's request for an extra $23.7 million next year.

In the first price and profits ruling affecting a government-regulated industry since Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau announced the restraints Oct. 13, the commission said it had no choice but to order the company to scale down expected 1976 revenues to $434.1 million from $440.8 million.

The company's 1.5 million subscribers will still pay more for telephone service starting Jan. 1 but the amount of the scaled-down increase must still be calculated.

The commission said the wage-price restraints might lead to a serious deterioration in British Columbia telephone service and that the restraints were not sensitive to the requirements of public utilities.

The unanimous decision by a three-member panel headed by commission vice-president Guy Roberge, included disallowance of $1.5 million in proposed salary increases in excess of the wage guides for company employees not covered by union contracts.

The commission was in the final stages of editing a 39-page decision which would have given B.C. Telephone an increase of 9.8 per cent on most services but only 5.4 per cent on basic monthly residential telephone rates when the wage-price restraints were imposed.

The increases would have added $23.7 million to the company's 1976 revenues but after assessing the impact of the guides the commission reduced the amount to $17 million.

The commission made clear its dissatisfaction with the restraint program and said it would restore the full increase to B.C. Telephone if the company can win an exemption from the restraints from the newly appointed federal anti-inflation board.

The commission also warned of a possible "serious deterioration of telephone service" in British Columbia.

Spy Charge 'Surprise' To Police

Victoria police union president Sgt. Pat Braiden said today he was taken "totally by surprise" by allegations made by a Tory MP Monday that the Canadian Armed Forces security division was spying on police associations, including the association here.

Conservative MP Eldon Woolliams (Calgary North) said in the House of Commons that he was told two Armed Forces members had carried out an investigation of the Saskatchewan Federation of Police Associations in Regina and the Calgary Police Association.

He said outside the House a similar incident took place in Victoria alluding to someone taking "something from inside or outside a hall and disappearing with it."

Woolliams said the investigations appeared designed to get information about the possibility of a police strike and the attitudes of police associations with respect to capital punishment.

Police associations throughout Canada, including the one in Victoria, have threatened to stage a four-hour sit-down protest if the federal cabinet continues with its practice of commuting death penalties.

Braiden said as far as he knew no armed forces' member has infiltrated the Victoria association's meetings.

He added, however: "We're not naive. We know who we're dealing with and what to look out for."

Meanwhile defence minister James Richardson, who replied he know nothing of the incidents raised by the MP, said he would make inquiries.

$30,000 JOBS CUT

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada has eliminated 23 senior marketing positions in Montreal as part of company cutbacks to curb losses incurred during one of its worst economic years, an airline spokesman said Monday.

The marketing executives involved, some earning $30,000 a year, "have not been fired and there will be an effort made to find them other jobs," the spokesman said.

"But they have been told that their jobs no longer exist and if no new employment can be found within the company, some financial settlement will have to be made."

The executives, some with more than 27 years' service with Air Canada, were developing marketing plans to minimize the effects on the airline of the current recession at the time their jobs were eliminated.

The crown corporation spokesman said he could not give accurate figures on how many executives had lost their jobs so far this year, "but it is quite a number."

The spokesman said that "marketing is not the first, nor will it be the last department to be hit" by the airline's cutbacks.

ICBC Wins Court Test

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia court of appeal has, by a two-to-one decision, dismissed an appeal from 37 private insurance companies against a B.C. supreme court ruling that the provincial government had the right to establish the automobile insurance and the Insurance Corporation of B.C.

The insurance companies argued that insurance is an interprovincial concern while government lawyers contended that insurance falls under provincial jurisdiction.

Mr. Justice M. M. McFarlane and Mr. Justice A. B. Carrothers voted for the dismissal while Mr. Justice A. B. Robertson dissented.

The matter is expected to be further appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Wage Hikes Lower In Quarter

OTTAWA (CP) — Collective agreements settled in the third quarter of 1975 show a lower rate of wage increase than those in the second quarter, labor department figures indicated Monday.

Of 114 settlements during the third quarter, the average annual increase in base rates was 16.8 per cent in compound terms. The comparable figure for the second quarter was 18.5 per cent.

The figures are based on an analysis of collective agreements covering 500 or more workers in industries other than construction.

Of the total settlements, 35 provided for a cost-of-living allowance (COLA) and the average increase was 11.2 per cent excluding the COLA clause. The remaining 79 settlements provided for an average 19.4 per cent increase.

Secret Nuclear Meetings

LONDON (AP) — Diplomats of seven nuclear-exporting countries, including Canada, today opened secret meetings on new safeguards against the spread of materials which may lead to new nuclear weapons stockpiles.

They conferred at the foreign office under strict secrecy. Their British hosts and their own embassies refused to disclose any details.

However, informants who insisted on anonymity said the two-day meeting will be devoted in part to an examination of recent or pending sales of nuclear technology and plants to countries which so far have no nuclear capacity.

These diplomats have met in London secretly on seveal occasions this year. They include senior representatives of the United States, Canada, Britain, the Soviet Union, West Germany, France and Japan.

The session got under way amid controversy over a series of deals including West Germany's mid-1975 sale to Brazil of nuclear reactors and fuel processing and enrichment plant to complete the nuclear fuel cycle.

B.C. Fed Boss $200 Above Guides

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

VANCOUVER — Probably the quickest round of salary negotiations in B.C. labor history was settled today at the B.C. Federation of Labor convention, raising secretary-treasurer Len Guy's salary to $200 above federal wage controls.

The 700 convention delegates in about two minutes voted to hike Guy's wages from $450 to $500 a week or $2,600 a year, symbolically $200 above the guidelines which the federation has vowed to fight.

The federation does not come under the guidelines which imposed the wage controls on Canadian organizations with more than 500 employees the federation has about 125,000 members or employers, but only about 15 employees.

The salary hike and another resolution upping the per capita dues of federation affiliates by two cents per month passed easily but another motion trying to separate the positions of the federation's elected officers from federation staff did not fare so well.

The motion, sponsored by the B.C. Government Employees Union, would have prohibited an elected officer of the federation from becoming an employee of the federation during his term of office.

The issue centred around assistant secretary-treasurer John Squire, also a vice-president of the federation. Squire was elected at the last convention but was appointed to a full-time federation position earlier this year.

BCGEU general secretary John Fryer said the appointment had set a dangerous precedent. He said a situation could develop where the six elected vice-presidents would all end up on the federation payroll and "sit around making recommendations on our own salaries."

Debate on the motion threatened to break down into an issue of support or non-support for the federation executive.

A carpenters' union delegate said the motion was an "underhanded way" of getting at the leaders.

The constitution committee under whose jurisdiction the resolution fell, recommended non-concurrence with the motion and delegates supported that stand with only the BCGEU contingent opposed.

'Equal Sacrifice' Motto As Barrett Opens Pitch

Premier Barrett's theme in the Dec. 11 election will be "equal sacrifices for all and favors for none."

In a prepared statement announcing the election Monday, the premier said the "unheard majority" must be protected in the federal government's anti-inflation program.

The B.C. government supports that program and its actions in the last few weeks have proved that, he said, but further new polices are needed to ensure the program is fair.

Barrett said he wants the people to judge his leadership in sending B.C.'s striking workers back on the job in October and imposing a price freeze for two months.

"The relevant issue is strong and effective leadership," he said.

"Now for at least the next three years, we will be faced with new challenges that mean making tough but fair decisions, both for management and labor, as well as for the voiceless majority.

"This, however, requires broad support," he said.

The governments new policies will be spelled out in the course of the five-week election campaign.

"I am asking you to consider all these matters and frankly to give me your support so that we may all share and lead in a way that satisfies the needs of our total community — and in a way that is fair to all British Columbians."

Barrett said the deciding factor is dissolving the legislature and calling the election was his fear that the federal program "was beginning to rip Canadians apart on a special interest basis."

"Big business can be heard. Big labor can be heard. But the voiceless must also be represented," he said.

British Columbians want leadership, said Barrett, but if the fight is to last three years the NDP government must get a mandate to get fully into the battle.

Besides the special legislation to send strikers back to work earlier this month and the price freeze on food drugs and energy, Barrett said his government has shown leadership in the past in the land commission; establishment of rent controls; natural gas controls; Mincome; Pharmacare; and agriculture income assurance.

"In almost every one of these areas we faced negative criticism from the Opposition and strong resistance from large vested interests," he said.

The NDP's struggle is to build a "more humane and caring community", he said, but the work must be done together with strong support from the public.

The government called an election before redistribution because a mandate is so necessary, said Barrett, and this way the people will vote in the same ridings as in 1972—without "interference" from the government.

even trying as an independent but there is little chance he will be in the race.

"I'm interested in the politics but not in the parties quite frankly," he said adding that "the humble mayor of the city of Victoria is not a factor at all."

All four parties have been in contact with him about running, said Pollen.

Saanich and The Islands has held no nomination meetings for any of the four provincial parties. Incumbent is Socred Hugh Curtis. Conservatives have scheduled a nomination meeting for Nov. 12.

Oak Bay Conservative party formally nominated Tory leader Dr. Scott Wallace on June 7, but rest of the parties have empty slates. Socreds will hold their nomination meeting this Thursday.

Esquimalt has only one nominated candidate Liberal Len Stephenson, a retired barber. Incumbent is NDP MLA Jim Gorst.

Cowichan-Malahat Liberals have nominated school principal Jev Tothill, but so far his competition has not been named. This riding was left without representation with the resignation earlier this month of Transport Minister Bob Strachan.

Nanaimo riding slate has Finance Minister Dave Stupich and Conservative Marjorie Moore on it so far.

Alberni Conservatives have nominated businessman Bud Schroeder. NDP incumbent is Bob Skelly, but no formal nomination has yet been made. Liberals will nominate their candidate Nov. 14.

Comox is the closest of the Island ridings to a full slate with NDP incumbent Karen Sanford, expected to run against the Conservative party's Vic Stephens, a Courtenay lawyer, and Liberal candidate Norm McLaren, a Campbell River banker. Socreds have scheduled their nominating meeting for Nov. 14 in Courtenay.

In other parts of the province the following candidates had been nominated prior to Monday's election announcement. (X—Member of last legislature):

New Democratic Party: Vancouver Centre (2 seats—X-Gary Lauk; X-Emery Barnes. Vancouver-Burrard (2)—X-Norman Levi; X-Rosemary Brown. Vancouver South (2)—X-Jack Radford; Michael Harcourt. Cariboo—Grethyll Adams. New Westminster—X-Dennis Cocke. Chilliwack—Ian Cameron. Boundary-Similkameen—Yvonne Storey. Prince Rupert—X-Graham Lea.

Liberals: Delta—Art Bates. Yale-Lillooet—Armand Foisy. Peace River North—Des Martin.

Social Credit: Kamloops—Rafe Mair.

Bill 146 'Betrayal'

VANCOUVER — Delegates to the B.C. Federation of Labor convention Monday called for the repeal of the NDP's back-to-work legislation. (Other convention story on Page 11.)

The federation's legislative committee, which recommended the action, said the bill is a betrayal of all workers who have actively supported the NDP and the old CCF.

The committee's report also recommended the repeal of Bill 84, which amended the Labor Code against the wishes of the labor movement.

The motion calling for the repeals passed easily.

TIME CANADA PAID OUT DOUBLE REAL PROFITS

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian edition of Time magazine paid twice as much in dividends to its U.S. parent, Time Inc., in 1973 and 1974 as it actually earned, a New Democratic Party MP said Monday.

Cyril Symes told the Commons this practice is "obviously designed to milk the Canadian company of as much money as possible," and called for an investigation. His motion did not receive the required unamimous consent.

Under legislation before the Commons, advertisers in the Canadian edition of Time would no longer be able to count the advertising costs as business expenses unless the Canadian magazine's content was 80 per cent different from its American editions.

Big Salaries For Athletes A Poser

OTTAWA (CP) — The government does not know how huge wage settlements given some professional athletes will be affected by selected wage and price controls imposed Oct. 14, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Monday.

Answering questions at a Commons finance committee, he said it will be up to the anti-inflation board to consider each case on its merits to decide whether a particular contract can be allowed if it breaks the penalty-backed guides, he said.

Macdonald switched to examples.

"If Toronto Argonauts signed Montreal Alouettes' receiver Johnny Rodgers, then perhaps he would be covered" by the penalty-backed guides for acceptable income rises.

"But Anthony Davis a U.S. import back just signed by Toronto would not be covered because he's just coming into the Canadian work force for the first time," Macdonald said.

Too Easy on Cheats: UIC Change Rapped

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative MPs said Monday the government is too easy on people who cheat the Unemployment Insurance Commission and too hard on those legitimately out of work.

The comments came as the Commons continued second-reading debate on a bill amending the Unemployment Insurance Act.

The bill, among other changes, would increase the premiums paid by employers and employees and double the disqualification period for workers who quit or are fired.

One of the more controversial changes would cut people aged 65 and over from paying premiums and from collecting benefits.

Tory Stan Darling said the government is trying to trick people into thinking the changes to the act will save money.

"What it is really doing is doubling the load borne by those who have been carrying the burden all along, the employees and the employers, while not doing anything to ensure that the UIC cheats are shut off the program."

Darling said the government should extend the current eight-week period that a person must work before collecting benefits.

"Right now, a person can work for eight weeks, get fired deliberately and then draw benefits for about half-a-year," he said.

Consideration should also be given to changing the eligibility of highly-paid machine operators or Great Lake ship captains who work eight or nine months a year and collect unemployment insurance benefits for the balance, he said.

Robert Coates (PC—Cumberland-Colchester North) criticized a section of the bill which doubles the disqualification period to six weeks for those who quit without just cause or get fired from jobs for misconduct.

He said the change would allow the unscrupulous employer to tell a worker:

"You're going to toe the line or I'm going to fire you and you're going to be without benefits for six weeks."

Dief Loses Conference Protest Bid

OTTAWA (CP(— John Diefenbaker tried unsuccessfully Monday to put the Commons on record as strongly protesting the apparent French decision not to invite Canada to an economic summit in Paris.

Diefenbaker failed to get the necessary unamimous consent from the Commons for a motion protesting the "inexcusable" decision.

Meanwhile, External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said that Canada still hopes that it will be invited to the conference, Nov. 15-16, to be attended by the United States, France, Britain, West Germany, Italy and Japan.

Canada's bid to attend is strongly backed by West Germany and the U.S. Britain and Japan also have expressed sympathy with the idea, MacEachen said.

Diefenbaker said the French decision creates a precedent in that for the first time since the Second World War it denies the right of Canada to attend an international conference.

CRASH PROBE REJECTED

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Members of the federal cabinet appeared Monday to reject a coroner's jury recommendation for a public inquiry into the crash of a Panarctic Oils Ltd. plane in the Arctic in October, 1974.

Transport Minister Otto Lang told the Commons that transport and safety issues discussed by the jury in Yellowknife have already been "canvassed" by his own department's investigation into the crash which resulted in the deaths of 32 aboard the aircraft.

Justice Minister Ron Basford stated that it is up to provincial attorneys general to agree on uniform reciprocal subpoena powers between provinces to deal with the problem encountered by the Panarctic crash inquest in getting witnesses from outside the Northwest Territories to testify.

The coroner's jury recommended Saturday that a public inquiry be conducted into the crash because its inability to subpoena witnesses prevented it arriving at a firm verdict on the causes of the accident.

In the Commons Monday New Democrat Stuart Leggatt asked Lang whether he would allow a full public inquiry as called for by the jury and relatives of victims of the crash.

Speed Curb Pressed

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is again going to ask all provinces to establish 55-mile-an-hour highway speed limits, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said Monday.

He told a meeting of the Canadian Automobile Association Canadians have a moral responsibility to reduce their fuel consumption "bearing in mind that our per capita use of energy is the second highest in the world."

As Ottawa has no jurisdiction over provincial highway speeds, he made it clear all the federal government could do is try and persuade the provinces the move would be a good one.

Gillespie also said Canadians should change car-buying habits to purchase economy models instead of what he termed "the gas guzzlers."

. . . I DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO: JEAN

OTTAWA (CP) — Jean Marchand, minister without portfolio since the federal cabinet was shuffled in September, says he still doesn't know what his new duties are.

Dan McKenzie said in the Commons Monday that he misses directing questions to Mr. Marchand during the daily question period.

"In order that we can direct questions to him in the future, will the honorable member tell us his duties in cabinet?" asked McKenzie.

Marchand replied: "Mr. Speaker, as soon as I know I will tell the honorable member."

Watch it Boo-Boo . . .

YOGI BEAR WILL HAVE HIS DAY IN TOP COURT

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada agreed Monday to hear an appeal in which the Quebec government is trying to stop the Kellogg's Company of Canada from using cartoon characters such as Yogi Bear in television commercials.

The province is arguing that the commercials contravene its consumer protection laws and is appealing a Quebec Court of Appeal judgment that favored the company.

Kellogg's, a large manufacturer of breakfast cereals, argues that the Quebec law prohibiting the cartoon commercials is unconstitutional because the matter was under federal jurisdiction.

One year ago, the Quebec Superior court ruled the provincial law constitutional and ordered Kellogg's to stop the commercials. The Quebec Appeal Court later overturned that decision.

The province says its law falls within the scope of civil rights and consumer protection, areas of provincial jurisdiction granted under the British North American Act. The appeal likely will be heard early in 1976.

Senator in Conflict Scandal

By DAN POTTIER

OTTAWA — A Progressive Conservative MP Monday called for a judicial inquiry into a possible conflict of interest involving Liberal Senator Louis de G. Giguerre — a possibility denied by the senator.

The case involves the duty-free shop at Montreal's Dorval Airport and the company owners' successful attempts in 1972 to have the federal transport department renew its contract.

Elmer MacKay (PC—Central Nova) tabled a petition in the Commons which says the Quebec senator made a profit of $95,000 by buying and reselling shares of Sky Shops Export Ltd., owners of the duty-free shop, soon after the contract renewal.

Senator Giguere said in an interview the time frame of events "seems irregular" as presented by the Tories "but it is not."

He said he would be raising a question of privilege on the matter tonight in the Senate.

The senator admitting making the $95,000 profit and admitted that "it seems curious — it makes it look as if I were being paid for some services, but it was just coincidence."

Transport Minister Otto Lang said in the House he would follow up MacKay's representations.

The Battle Is Joined

Manufacturing election issues is an old political game. None seem better skilled at it than our own Premier Dave Barrett. Oozing sincerity in his sombre blue suit, he called a snap election on Monday. Ostensibly, his issue is anti-inflation and anxiety about the economy, but it could as easily have been something else. For the last two months the premier has been manoeuvring towards an election. He thought he had his issue with Bill 146, forcing several industries back to work. Prime Minister Trudeau's wage and profit guidelines stole the shine from that gambit, so Barrett has worked twice as hard to come up with a less clear-cut issue.

The premier is a very recent convert to the anti-inflation bandwagon. Some may remember his curious waffling act of last month, when his public comments on the Trudeau anti-inflation package went back and forth, hot, cold and lukewarm, changing day by day. And on the subject of controls in itself, he told the press repeatedly last year — when federal Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield made them an issue — that it was too late, that perhaps they might have worked if they had been imposed two or three years ago.

Political observers will also notice that the premier has called an election in defiance of his own solemn pledges to wait until stiff election spending laws had been enacted and after redistribution had been effected.

Representation by population is going to be a joke for the next few years in several burgeoning areas of the province, since the legislature will operate along decade-old boundaries. And without restraints on spending, B.C. will be treated to probably the wildest-spending campaign that can be crammed into six weeks since the demise of Amor de Cosmos. It will be land office business for printers, newspapers, radio and telvision stations, but somehow we think an election could be waged without the daily full-page ads, the intelligence-insulting 30-second spots.

The outcome will depend to some extent upon the two old-line political parties, the Liberals and Conservatives. Both Liberal leader Gordon Gibson and Tory chief Scott Wallace are sure to play up their underdog roles. If each party runs a large slate of candidates — Wallace has promised a full 55 — the disgruntled, unsure and protest votes could go heavily enough their way perhaps to produce a minority government.

Recent soundings of the mood of the electorate indicate a very large body of undecided voters, as much as 40 per cent. Such was the case before the September ballot in Ontario which put the Tories back in, but with only a working minority.

In B.C., if anything is clear after the turbulent past three years of provincial politics, it is that a large segment of the electorate has been turned off by the New Democratic Party, but at the same time, has no wish whatsoever to return to the old days of Social Credit.

Election campaigns have a strange life of their own. This one may or may not be run along the firm tracks set out for it by the premier — support for his anti-inflation campaign, such as it is. Social Credit leader Bill Bennett has already mapped out his party's strategy — the government's record of budget overruns, crown corporation losses, centralization of authority and power.

Barrett himself realizes these constitute his administration's weakest side. For example, in the solemn five-page statement announcing the election and recounting his social and economic reforms of the last three years, Barrett said nothing of ICBC. He concentrated on the popular moves of his administration, Mincome and Pharmacare, aid to farmers, increased natural gas export prices. He made no new promises, but solicited "broad support" to make the tough decisions challenging us in the months and years to come. ("Difficult" and "sacrifice" are words which the premier used prodigally in his statement.)

Whether he inspires the voters with the blood, toil, tears and sweat approach to the future struggle against inflation or whether Bennett forces the NDP back on the defensive with constant jabs and jibes about past performance is something we won't know until Dec. 12.

A Steel Glint in High Court

As you expect, the walls are wood-panelled (stained walnut at a guess) and book-lined (Revised Statutes of Canada, Harvard Law Review, Spain and the Rule of Law).

The magisterial dignity really isn't necessary. Entering his chambers to interview the Chief Justice of the supreme court of Canada, you feel in any case a bit like a schoolboy with a stolen apple bulging in your pocket.

An hour later you come away feeling as if you have talked to a friend — a very bright friend with, every now and then, a reassuring glint of steel.

Bora Laskin is extraordinarily, almost disconcertingly, informally relaxed, open. The staff call him "the Chief"; former students refer to him as "Bora." He has no great physical presence. He is below medium height; a face with strong planes that seems better fitted to a workman than to a judge. He is human rather than awesome.

Then you remember that Laskin, with that touch of steel, once said "Power contracts with a failure to use it." You remember how his nomination as chief justice was hailed as the most imaginative single appointment of the Trudeau government. And you realize that it is happening: in this, its centenary year, the supreme court at last is becoming supreme in every sense of that word.

Truly Supreme

In the judicial sense, the court has been supreme only since 1949, when appeals to the British Privy Council were abolished. In the technical sense, the court became supreme only this year when it at last gained control over its own docket — that is, gained the right to choose the cases it should hear rather than have to accept all appeals where more than $10,000 was at stake.

In the legal sense, the court is at last becoming what Laskin wants it to be: not only a court of last appeal but a supervisory court that oversees the entire judicial structure.

One of the court's most severe critics has been Paul Weiler, a former law professor now chairman of the B.C. labor relations board.

Weiler now says: "My view has changed. Court judgments often exhibit great judicial craftsmanship; it has moved discussion (of the law) to a much more fundamental and much more difficult plane."

Specific examples of the court's legal creativity: extending to individuals the right to challenge the constitutionality of federal and provincial statutes, a right which now could permit a challenge of the federal wage and price controls program; clarifying the "thoroughly obfuscated" state of the law concerning precedence among creditors in a bankruptcy; defining the powers of provinces over river pollution carried down by rivers from outside their boundaries.

The change has not happened because of Laskin alone. Among his colleagues, Justices Ronald Martland, R. G. Dickson and Wilfred Judson stand out as masters of jurisprudence.

Beyond a doubt, though, Laskin has led the change. His judgments contain the precedent-packed authority of the outstanding legal scholar that he is. They also are notable for felicity of language. In the case of Natural Parents vs The Superintendent of Child Welfare, Laskin chided lawyers for anchoring an argument upon an empty phrase, "as if it was self-fulfilling, if not also self-revealing."

Laskin's judgments can come alive with anger. In Fred Mitchell vs The Queen, he criticized the National Parole Board for claiming, "a tyrannical authority ... almost as if the inmate were a mere puppet on a string." They also are alive with compassion. In his lone dissent to the court's judgment against abortionist Henry Morgentaler, Laskin wrote of "a friendless young woman, a native of another country, who is alone, frightened by her pregnancy ... who in desperation seeks the assistance of a qualified surgeon."

In 16 major cases between his appointment in January, 1974, and last summer, Laskin dissented all but four times. The tag of "The Great Dissenter" — after former U.S. supreme court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes — makes Laskin uncomfortable. But not in the least inclined to change his style.

"No one dissents for the joy of it: it's sheer, hard work. My views, however, are as firmly rooted in the law as those of any other member of the court. And minority opinions, over time, can become majority opinions." May not divided judgments weaken the court's image of infallibility? "Perhaps. But the public and lawyers must understand that we deal only with cases that involve difficult and debatable issues on which differing opinions can readily be held."

By the sheer quality of his judgments whether for the majority, the minority or for himself (his 40-page text in the Morgentaler case was twice the length of the opinion of the eight other judges), Laskin has set models of legal creativity for his colleagues to follow, and to match.

He is well aware of the limits. "Prudence is necessary. We are not a legislature. We do not make law in any global sense." He is well aware also of the possibilities. "We have moved the law in several areas, and we cannot escape this responsibility." A supreme court unafraid to be supreme—when it has to be.

DAVID MACDONALD

Portugal—Slow Rise from Chaos

OPORTO — The leader of Portugal's second most popular party thinks the communist party is following a plan that could eventually lead to the United States Sixth Fleet being forced out of the Mediterranean.

He thinks the political situation is "better now" than during the chaotic months of rule by pro-communist prime minister Vasco Goncalves but "it still is very serious unless the influence of the communists can be cut down."

Francisco sa Carneiro is secretary-general of the Partido Popular Democratico, (the Popular Democratic Party known as the PPD), which won 26.4 per cent of the vote in the election last April for an assembly to write a new constitution for Portugal. The socialist party led by Mario Soares won 37.9 per cent.

During the election he was too ill to take part and has been convalescing since then in Malaga, Spain.

But in the month since he returned to Oporto and resumed leadership of the party, his driving will and sharply-defined views have revitalized the PPD to the point where it is developing into a formidable force in Portugal's political maelstrom.

Socialist Marxists

Inside Portugal, he is becoming a more significant figure than Mario Soares and could become prime minister in the near future, should elections be held.

Little-known outside Portugal, he is aware that the public relations skills of Mario Soares have ensured that much of international opinion accepts Soares and his socialists as the saviors of representative democracy in the country.

"This just is not true," he said in an interview. "The socialists were strongly anti-communist during the April elections and many potential PPD supporters voted for them because they thought they had the best chance of keeping the communists out of power. It was tactical voting.

"But since then the socialists have been moving closer to Marxist positions laid down in their April election manifesto in both speeches and voting actions inside the consiltituent assembly."

To redress the balance of international opinion he plans to tour Europe, Canada and the United States later this month "if the political situation allows.

"We are a party of the non-Marxist left," he said.

"We believe in Western-style social democracy and support worker participation in industry though not the kind of outright worker control that is causing such chaos in Portugal today.

"I believe that we would win a majority in a new election today."

Diplomats, businessmen and Portugese politicians spoken to all agreed in successful rallies for both the PPD favor, particularly in the industrial and wine-growing north, where the majority of the country's nine million population lives.

Popular anger at the excesses of the communists and far left has been reflected in successful rallies for both the PPD and even the Social Democratic Centre party, the CDS, which is to the right of the PPD and won only 7.7 per cent of the April vote. The CDS suffered a ruthless campaign of systematic terror from the communists and far left that sent its candidates into hiding, ended its program of election meetings and scared its supporters into voting for the socialists.

PPD DEMONSTRATION
... claims quarter of vote

Sa Carneiro says his party "fully supports" the provisional government of Admiral Pinheiro de Azevedo, now prime minister — the sixth such provisionary government since the coup of Gen. Spinola last year.

"But the behavior of the communist party must be changed or it must be expelled from the government. Ten per cent of its actions support the government but 90 per cent are in opposition to the government.

"I think the indiscipline in the army is very serious and is the last stage of a very determined plan of subversion by Moscow and the Portuguese communist party.

"They have a two-stage strategy. Its first part was to gain control of our former colonies such as Mozambique and Cape Verde. They are trying now in Angola through the Marxist MPLA, (the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola) that is Soviet-supplied.

"Secondly, they seek to take power in Portugal or at least create a zone of instability to help in controlling the Mediterranean and to weaken European will to resist Soviet expansionism."

The policy of detente of Leonid Brezhnev is, he says, only for public consumption.

"The real line being followed is that of party theoretician Suslov and others, who are for immediate takeover of power by revolutionary means.

"By controlling Portugal they would control the North Atlantic and if they can control Spain and Morocco they will have the Mediterranean and will expel the United States Sixth fleet."

Political Vs. Military

He is concerned that international opinion is not aware of executions of blacks in Mozambique and Cape Verde who had co-operated with the former Portuguese authorities and he blames Admiral Rosa Coutinho, former governor of Angola, for the anarchy there as independence day approaches.

"He did not deal impartially with the three independence movements, favoring the MPLA. He made no preparations to bring blacks and whites together after independence. As a result we have this tremendous influx of Angolan refugees and no jobs to give them."

Sa Carneiro rejects "absolutely" a recent suggestion by Prime Minister Azevedo that the existing Constituent assembly could be transformed early next year into a national assembly without the inconvenience of an election.

"This would be a fraud on the Portuguese people, who have demonstrated their deep common-sense and deep taste for liberty."

He also believes the country's problems will be solved "by political means, not military" a reference to rumors of secret right-wing and left-wing armies.

"Our very serious economic situation can improve only when the political situation is solved. And the solution lies in reducing the undue Communist party influence in the press, the unions, local and national civil administrations and the armed forces."

Americans Work Harder And Longer for Less

By BOGDAN KIPLING

WASHINGTON — Americans are working harder, staying on the job and accepting relatively small wage increases, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

During the first nine months of this year, eight out of 10 workers accepted pay hikes of less than 10 per cent a year.

Compared with last year's 2.6 man-days lost in strikes for every 1,000 man-days worked, strikes losses in the first eight months of 1975 declined to 2.1 man-days.

In the quarter ended Sept. 30, productivity shot up at an annual rate of 9.5 per cent in the private sector of the economy, the biggest such increase in nearly five years.

The productivity increase resulted mainly from better utilization of plant and equipment as the economy started reviving in late summer. Output in manufacturing plants, for example, was 15.8 per cent higher.

During the first quarter of this year productivity was sinking out of sight, with a drop of 9.6 per cent in the manufacturing and lesser declines in other sectors of the economy.

American unions negotiated contracts covering nearly 2.5 million workers so far this year and the average increases in wages and fringe benefits amounted to 7.9 per cent, spread over the life of the contract.

Perhaps the most amazing development was in the construction industry where wages rose less rapidly than in the economy as a whole. Construction settlements averaged 7.4 per cent a year over the contract. Construction workers have traditionally received the biggest pay hikes.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of November 4, 1915

For the attempted murder of H. M. (Lord) Bacon, a grizzled old prospector and one of the best known characters on Vancouver Island, John Smith and Sol Balmain were yesterday brought to Victoria and were lodged in the Wilkinson Road jail. The story of the shooting and the alleged attempt to murder came to light yesterday. According to the story Bacon told police at Campbell River, he had an argument over staking some claims with the two other men. He claims he had staked the property some time ago and did some work on it before Balmain and Smith came on the scene. The two came upon one day walking on the road to his claims, when one shot at him with a rifle, the bullet passing through his hand, nearly severing his thumb. The second shot grazed his groin and after that, Bacon said he ran for the bush.

The Word for Pensioners: Go West, Old Man

By LEONARD SHIFRIN

Welfare's patchwork quilt acquired another patch last month. It's called a Spouse's Allowance, and an estimated 60,000 senior citizens will receive first cheques under the new program in November.

The federal government's Old Age Security (OAS) program provides $129 monthly to all those over the age of 65. Its Guaranteed Income Supplement (GIS) adds a further $91 to this each month for a single pensioner with no other source of income, and $81 for a married pensioner with no additional income.

This supplement is reduced by $1 for every $2 of outside income, so a single pensioner is guaranteed $220 a month and receives some part of the supplement as long as his or her total income is not more than $311. For two married pensioners the amount guaranteed is $420, and supplementation ends when their combined income exceeds $582 a month.

The anomaly the new Spouse's Allowance is directed to is married couples with little or no outside income and only one of the partners over the age of 65 — typically, a husband in his late 60s and a wife in her early 60s. For OAS-GIS purposes, he was a single pensioner. If the couple had no other source of income, then the two of them lived on the single pension of $220.

With the new federal program, the husband's pension reverts to the $210 married rate and his wife receives a $210 Spouse's Allowance. Total: $420, the same amount received by two married pensioners.

As long as neither couple has any outside income, the new patch fits perfectly. But a new set of anomalies is born if each has, for instance, a $200-a-month annuity.

Unlike the supplement, the Spouce's Allowance is reduced on a dollar-for'dollar basis where the family has additional income. Thus the two-pensioner couple's supplement is reduced by half the amount of the annuity, leaving a monthly income of $520. The second couple's Spouse's Allowance is reduced by the full amount of the annuity, and they wind up with the same $420 they had before.

The thing about patches is that they have to start somewhere and end somewhere. And that generally makes for anomalies at both ends.

By setting 60 as the minimum age of eligibility for receiving Spouse's Allowance, the program still leaves a married couple living on a single pension where the younger spouse is in his or usually her late 50s instead of early 60s.

Why? Because when you build with patches you have to draw lines. The minimum age could have been 55 rather than 60. But then why not 50 or 45?

And guess what happens if the pensioner dies before the spouse reaches 65. Not only does his pension end, but so does her Spouse's Allowance.

Seems absurd? Sure, but to have continued it would have been even more anomalous since she is now a single person aged less than 65. Other single people aged less than 65 were never eligible for such an allowance in the first place. Except in British Columbia.

And that brings us to the next set of anomalies.

In the past three years, seven provinces have added their own patches to the federal quilt — no two of them exactly the same. British Columbia was first with its Mincome minimum income plan. Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta followed with similar programs.

All are directed to those with little or no income other than the federal pension. They raise the income guarantee for a single person from the federal $220 a month to levels ranging from $228 in Manitoba to $265 in Alberta.

These provincial supplements are reduced on a dollar-for-dollar basis where the pensioner has outstripped his eligibility for any of these provincial programs, but still qualifies for a portion of the federal supplement.

He also still qualifies for the provincial supplements in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

In New Brunswick, every recipent of the federal Old Age Security pension gets an annual supplement of $60 from the province. This is increased to a $120 annual supplement for those who received any part of the federal Guaranteed Income Supplement during the year.

In Nova Scotia, only GIS recipients received provincial supplements. These range from $50 a year, for those qualifying for less than a third of the federal supplement, to $110 a year for those receiving the full amount of the federal supplement.

Of the seven provinces with their own income programs for senior citizens, only British Columbia has reduced the eligibility age for its program. It lowered the age limit from 65 to 60.

And that made B.C. so popular that last year it had to introduce a one-year residency requirement for those under 65 to staunch the flow from the rest of Canada.

The process by which guarantee levels are established in the various provinces is highly obscure, but appears to bear some curious relationship to the proximity of an election in the province.

Alberta, which now boasts the highest levels in the country, wasn't even near the top until this election year. Ontario also began the year with benefits lagging behind those in B.C., but increased them twice in the course of the year. The second increase was announced two weeks before voting day.

British Columbia, the next province going to the polls, last week announced January increases in its benefit levels that will put two married pensioners about $5 a month further ahead in B.C. than in Alberta. Single pensioners will still be a few dollars better off in Alberta.

A country-wide guide to maximizing benefits under the system could be presented as a Monopoly game for peripatetic senior citizens. Sample cards:

The company you invested your life's savings in went bankrupt. Go to British Columbia.

Ontario's minority government just fell, and an election has been called. Go to Ontario.

Kremlin Debates Benefits of Detente

By PETER OSNOS
The Washington Post

MOSCOW — In the Kremlin these days, a series of decisions is being made that will have a profound impact on what happens in the world during the next few years. The reason you aren't reading about them on the front pages is that we don't know what they are.

But we do know that a major review of policies at home and abroad always takes place in the months leading up to Communist party congresses and there have been enough hints lately to confirm that the process is well underway now for next February's scheduled session —the 25th Party Congress since the Bolshevik Revolution.

In a sense, this period functions like a presidential election year in the United States, providing the stimulus for assessing the state of the country and the personalities that lead it. The difference, of course, is that here the only real debate goes on in secret among a handful of people and the outcome is then presented to the assembled party faithful for speedy and always unanimous ratification.

Nonetheless, a party congress can mark shifts of national policy every bit as dramatic as the choice of a new U.S. president. At the 10th Congress in 1921, Lenin disclosed his new Economic Policy, which restored a measure of private enterprise to the the country for the next seven years. At the 15th Congress, Stalin took full control of party power by purging Leon Trotsky. And in 1956, at the 20th Congress, Nikita Khrushchev made his celebrated "secret speech" denouncing Stalin, which led to sweeping changes and a time of relative liberalism.

The last congress was convened in March 1971, months after it was originally scheduled to take place, apparently because the Politburo debates proved harder to resolve than seemed likely at first. What Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev finally unveiled was a strategy of political-military-economic bargaining with the West that has come to be known as detente.

Looking back now at accounts of that congress, the full significance of what took place was evidently not immediately clear. Brezhnev's Program of Peace, lacking specifics and packaged in conventional Kremlin rhetoric, struck most outsiders as more or less routine.

In retrospect, the tip-off that Moscow really was ready to negotiate seriously with the capitalist powers should have been the five-year plan announced at the time. It provided for substantial improvements in the Soviet standard of living, requiring large amounts of Western-supplied technology.

The reasoning was apparently that improving the atmosphere generally in East-West relations was bound to help the Soviets obtain the goods and expertise they need to improve the economy. That has certainly proven to be the case.

Moreover, the pattern of regular Soviet summits with European and American leaders, along with a host of pacts and cooperation agreements, has given Moscow a measure of security on its Western frontiers greater than at any time since the Second World War—another plus for Russians seeking a more comfortable way of life.

What probably is going on now behind those formidable Kremlin gates is a thorough-going appraisal of the past 4½ years, balancing the indisputable benefits of detente with the damages to ideological purity and Marxist-Leninist zeal of dealing so closely with the West.

In short, the question is how much tinkering there should be with present policies.

The tentative answer, based on the available Soviet sources and diplomatic analysis, is that unless Brezhnev steps down in February or soon after—an assumption far more widespread abroad than it is here—there will be only modest adjustments in Kremlin tactics.

Even if Brezhnev should retire for reasons of health, it seems unlikely that his potential successors would do anything drastically different. There might be some changes in tone or style, however, rather like the transition from Richard Nixon to Gerald Ford.

At this point then, the prevailing view is that the 25th Party Congress will essentially reaffirm detente, perhaps adding some refinements to existing doctrine to meet demands of the moment and to set the limits of cooperation with capitalists more clearly than they have been so far.

For instance, if the strategic arms negotiations do not produce an accord in time for the congress, as Brezhnev has publicly hoped, that failure would have to be factored in to the overall assessment of relations with the United States in recent years. The burden for so glaring an omission would plainly be placed on American obstinacy.

If, on the other hand, a last-minute SALT accord is achieved, it will be duly acclaimed. But in any event, the importance of superpower ties is certain to be stressed with the accent on positive accomplishments rather than temporary setbacks, even serious ones.

As for defining the terms of detente, that has aleady begun as a consequence of last summer's European security conference at Helsinki. To Moscow's chagrin, the West has portrayed the document that conference produced as a framework for easing East-West ideological confrontation, in effect a first step towards reform of Soviet controls on personal freedom and expression — which is not what the Kremlin had in mind for Helsinki at all.

On the broader issues, the line is being drawn very clearly. "So long as the antagonistic classes and opposing social systems exist," one newspaper said the other day, "the class struggle and ideological confrontation will continue. The task is not to allow this process to grow into armed clashes between countries and prevent it from hindering progress in economic, scientific and technological cooperation."

As much or more than in 1971, the Kremlin apparently wants relations with the West that will enable it to satisfy the population's hopes for continuing peace and improvements in their daily life. Those objectives, however, are to be obtained without any fundamental concessions to Western liberal or democratic standards.

WARRIOR FARMERS

CENTENARY EAST, Rhodesia — Ann and Dick Faasen see themselves both as farmers and warriors battling for survival against nationalist guerrillas who have shot at them and mined their roads in this region of deep bush, hills, ravines and rivers 140 miles northeast of Salisbury.

In this area, some 35 miles south of the Mozambique border, guerrillas, moving mostly in bands of four or five, have slipped into black villages, leaving under cover of night to attack isolated white farmers like the Faasens.

"It has really been a war of nerves," said Faasen, a rawboned 45-year-old Rhodesian who moved into the area 15 years ago, buying 2,000 acres of uncleared land on the banks of the Mutwa River. Like the 45 farmers in the immediate area he refers to the guerrillas as "terrs," — short for terrorists — and he says their campaign has been to drive out white settlers through hit-and-run attacks and through even more frequent actions to intimidate black farm laborers.

"But it is not working, we are here to stay," said Faasen, who goes about his chores constantly armed with a shotgun. His 42-year-old wife carried a 45-calibre automatic pistol. In the evenings, as the couple watch television in their floodlit house encircled by cyclone fencing, a Belgian FN machine gun lies on the floor within easy reach.

The Faasens are proud of what they have built. Starting with a small force of black laborers, they cleared the scrub, built miles of dirt roads and made the bricks for their buildings by baking the dirt of termite mounds. They built barns for the curing of tobacco and a store where Mrs. Faasen now sells dresses and cosmetics to local women.

Their house, a large airy building, is set beside a kidney-shaped swimming pool. About a quarter of a mile away is a village in the traditional style, small round mud and stick houses where Faasen's 59 laborers and their hundred dependents live. These workers receive their housing and food and an average of 50 cents a day. There are no schools for the children.

Until two years ago, says Mrs. Faasen, the farm provided the couple with a good life. The 200 acres of tobacco and corn brought good prices, and the cattle and vegetables they raised made them almost entirely self-sufficient. Then on Sept. 18, 1973, everything changed. One night, she said, as she and her husband were sleeping, a burst of machine-gun bullets ripped into their bedroom.

"There were two terrorists firing into the room from both windows," recalled Faasen. "they emptied two magazines and 15 shots hit Ann's elderdown. Miraculously she was only grazed in the arm with one bullet, although it took 30 stitches to close the wound. They were a pretty switched-on gang and had cut the telephone wires so the only thing we could do was pretend that we were dead."

That was the first attack in the East Centenary area. Since then there have been a number of others. Six members of white families have been shot to death, while a dozen more have been injured by mines planted on the roads by the guerrillas.

According to Faasen and government officials, hundreds of blacks, of whom there are about 80,000 in the region, have been killed and tortured by the guerrillas in attempts to extort food, money, and information, and also to frighten off the local laborers, without which the white farmers could not survive.

The whites, with government assistance, increased their vigilance and organized their defence. Now there are antigrenade gratings on all the windows in the Faasen home and eight inches of armored steel covers the sills. Most important, all 64 white farmers in the area are tied into a radio-telephone system that is monitored 24 hours a day.

Who's in Control?

harry bruce

Every so often a stray breeze blows aside an important man's curtain of public composure and, for just a moment, allows a shot of light to reveal something we may not want to know about him. The thing I do not want to know about Pierre Trudeau right now is that, from one day to the next, he really doesn't know what he's doing.

I'm self-employed in a business in which the supposedly professional fees have scarcely moved anywhere in a dozen years (much less up by 10 per cent). More than most people, I hate and fear inflation. More than most Liberals even, I want the Trudeau government to beat the bejeezus out of it.

I yearn to accept the judgment in the Oct. 20 Maclean's that Trudeau "faces the current emergency . . . with a curious sense of inner repose . . . Trudeau gives the impression of being in charge." But that's where that brief, unwelcome shaft of light appears, in Maclean's.

On Thanksgiving Day, Oct. 13, the day we are already learning to call "historic," Trudeau announces price-and-wage controls are about as likely a possibility for Canada as Beryl Plumptre's finding employment in a massage parlor.

Now there's a partial explanation for this. Peter C. Newman, the editor of Maclean's, interviewed Trudeau back on Sept. 30. By the time Maclean's printed the interview, Trudeau had announced the controls to a breathless and greedy nation.

But aside from the fact that that's not a nice way to treat Canada's very own news magazine, the extraordinary difference between what Trudeau told Maclean's of Sept. 30 and what he did on Oct. 13 suggests that either he was being sly with Newman or that it took him only two weeks to make up his mind to slap Canadians with the stiffest controls on their economic freedom since World War II.

He did concede on Sept. 30 that a time might come when mandatory controls would be imperative but then proceeded to explain, in his wise way, that they don't solve an "underlying malaise." Controls, he suggested, were neither a proper nor an effective device to change that psychology.

Britain had tried controls, the U.S. had tried controls. The lesson of "every experience I know of" was that, once the controls came off, everyone hustled so hard for price-and-wage increases that you begin more or less where you left off."

Nope, controls were not the answer. The answer was increasing productivity, indexing social assistance, teaching people to end their inflationary expectations. "If we knew that full controls would get people to realize that, there'd be no hesitation in bringing them in." The clear implication was that Trudeau knew controls did not teach anyone anything useful.

What changed his mind so fast? Did boredom with his own wisdom descend on, say Oct. 7? Did he arrive at cabinet one morning and say, "Okay boys, let's give it a whirl"?

With the multibillion-dollar resources of the Canadian government behind him, and all the expertise of his own legendary staff, did he finally decide on wage-and-price controls with the same sort of impulsiveness with which Blondie chooses a hat?

Let us all pray.

Went to Pole with Scott: Scientist Dies

Sir Charles Seymour Wright, distinguished scientist and explorer, died Saturday in Victoria General Hospital after a brief illness. He was 88.

A member of Capt. Robert Falcon Scott's Antarctic Expedition of 1910-1913, Sir Charles had lived in retirment in recent years on Salt Spring Island with his daughter, Pat Wright, a noted wildlife artist.

He is survived by another daughter, Mrs. Joan Raeside, and two grandchildren on Salt Spring and by a son Alfred Charles in Belize (British Honduras).

His wife died in Victoria in 1967.

Funeral arrangements are being handled through Cunningham Funeral Chapel, 1155 Fort.

Born in Toronto in 1887, Wright was educated at Upper Canada College and received bachelor and master of arts degrees from the University of Toronto.

He was awarded the coveted "1851 Exhibition" scholarship and went to Cambridge to study glaciology, meteorology, magnetism, gravity and aurora. His first research was on cosmic rays.

He left the university to join Scott's expedition, the lone Canadian among six scientists in the party.

He travelled with Scott as far as latitude 83.30 and saw the famed British explorer and his party leave on their final laps to the pole — never to return.

Later he navigated the search party and spotted the tent in which Scott had frozen to death.

Scott had hoped to be the first person to reach the south pole but when he arrived he discovered the Norwegian Roald Amundsen had achieved the goal a month earlier.

After the expedition Wright returned to England and became a lecturer in cartography and surveying at Cambridge.

His career was interrupted by the outbreak of the First World War. He joined the Royal Engineers and developed instruments and techniques for wireless communications in France. For his work he was awarded the Military Cross and Order of the British Empire.

Between wars he joined the British admiralty research department and rose to chief of scientific services for the Royal Navy.

During the Second World War he headed an establishment of 690 scientists developing new techniques to counter German weapons. For this and related scientific work he was knighted by King George VI.

In 1947 he retired from the admiralty and the next year was appointed scientific adviser to the British Joint Services Mission in Washington D.C., a post he held for two years.

He was director of the marine physical laboratory at the Scripps Institute of Oceanography in San Diego from 1952 to 1955 when he retired and moved to Esquimalt.

He became involved with the Pacific Naval Laboratories and in 1959, at age 72, returned to Antarctica for a research project jointly sponsored by Stanford University and Canada's Defence Research Board studying low frequency electro-magnetic waves.

Recognized as one of the world's leading authorities on micro-pulsations, he was awarded an honorary degree by the University of British Columbia in 1968.

50 SAANICH RESIDENTS GETTING TAX BREAK

Unexpected tax refunds will be going to about 50 Saanich property owners.

These are people whose property lies within the sewer enterprise system and who have been paying sewer taxes for five years or more.

For one reason or another, their properties have not been able to be connected with sewers.

Council agreed Monday that refunds, covering the sewer taxes paid, should be sent them.

Two of the property owners have already demanded refunds and Mayor Ed Lum said Monday that the amount paid them would be insignificant.

But on pressure from Ald. Joe Bourque, council was told that there could be as many as 50 properties involved.

"We will make a list and send refunds to all concerned."

Subdivision Bid On Tudor Ave. Just Misses

After a year-long struggle with Saanich council W. J. Fletcher has lost his bid to subdivide his property at 2761 Tudor to build a more convenient home for his ailing wife.

Ald. Fred Severson agonized openly with his conscience before deciding not to vote for the rezoning. Saying "I really want to vote for this."

Municipal solicitor Doug Patterson advised:

Mayor Ed Lum cautioned, "If this is approved it will set a precedent for other areas of the municipality."

Fletcher's home is an area zoned for a minimum of one-acre lots. He wanted to be included in the zoning across the street which allows minimum lots of 10,000 square feet which would enable him to build a smaller, second home.

Fletcher's property is within the sewer enterprise system and he contended, "The present situation is illogical and rather discriminatory. Now that I'm in the sewer enterprise system I'm asking that my property be treated in the same way as properties across the street."

Neighbors of Fletcher, however, said allowing Fletcher to subdivide would depreciate their properties.

When it came to vote, Alds. John McDonald, Joe Bourque and Bill Campbell voted in favor of Fletcher's application, the remainder of council voting together to defeat the action.

Bizarre Saanich Shooting

A 22-year-old Victoria man is recovering from a bullet wound in the left leg following a bizarre Saanich shooting late Saturday.

Wayne Worth, whose address was not released, was hit by one of five shots fired at his car as he drove from the Town and Country shopping centre south on Oak Street shortly before 11:30 p.m.

Saanich police say an orange late-model Vega hatchback suddenly pulled up on the driver's side, and a young male passenger yelled obscenities out the window then aimed a rifle at Worth.

None of the four passengers in the Worth vehicle was injured, but one bullet that pierced the driver's door lodged in his leg. A second one hit a rear fender and went into the trunk.

Worth had jammed on the brakes when the shooting began, and made a U-turn to head back to the shopping plaza where he met a Saanich police car.

He was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital where the bullet was removed and he was released.

The rifleman was 18-20 and had dirty blonde hair. The weapon was likely a .22 rifle, police said.

Police are not certain if the incident was related to any earlier events.

Girls Okay After Stupor

Two 14-year-old Colwood girls were reported fully recovered today after suffering severe alcoholic poisoning Halowe'en night.

Colwood RCMP said 40 ounces of liquor had been consumed in the incident.

One of the girls had recently moved from Victoria and returned for a visit. The two went out with several youths for the evening.

Both were taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Victoria police reported no mishaps from trick-or-treats, but Nanaimo RCMP said today they had at least one report of razor blades in apples.

TEACHERS SAFE, IF . . .

If Greater Victoria teachers accept an eight per cent increase in salaries this year, current class sizes and teacher numbers can be maintained, board chairman Bill Ross said Monday.

Ross earlier had indicated the board might be forced to cut 110 teachers because it was expected school boards would be held to 10 per cent ceiling on budget increases.

But Education Minister Eileen Dailly later confirmed she had made no statements that would hold board budgets to the 10 per cent.

Teacher salaries, however, will be subjected to the guidelines.

Under regulations an increase of 10 per cent less the percentage increase to teacher salaries last year is expected to be maintained.

Ross said teachers had pay increases of two per cent above the cost of living index the last two years which would mean they would be entitled to an eight per cent increase this year.

Before The Judge

An 18-year-old whose "bizarre conduct" led to a medical remand by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Monday pleaded guilty to obtaining lodging by fraud.

Rodney Thomas McQuarrie, North Vancouver, checked into the Empress Hotel Saturday, gave an assumed name and said he was a soccer player from Dover, England.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett told the court he had ordered a mean and two bottles of wine to the room for himself and a lady friend, then later failed to pay the $77.80.

"Is there some explanation for this bizarre conduct?" asked the judge.

McQuarrie's brother said the youth had recently undergone both medical and psychiatric treatment, and the judge ordered the accused see a doctor before appeaing again today.

The brother added McQuarrie is a North Delta high school student and "he plays soccer ... but not for England."

Sadat, Ford Stalemate On PLO

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (WP) — Despite a strong effort by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to get the U.S. to open a dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Orgnization, President Ford has reaffirmed that the United States "strongly" backs Israel in its refusal to negotiate with the Palestinians before they recognize the Jewish state.

In an interview with local television stations taped during his visit here Sunday to see Sadat, Ford said that the Palestinians "have refused to recognize the state of Israel, and we, of course strongly back the state of Israel, in its attitude that there must be recognition before there can be any contact or any participation by the Palestinians in any negotiations."

Sadat said Monday that the does not interpret President Ford's remarks as a rebuff of his proposal. He told ABC's Barrie Dunsmore in an interview that he would continue to do his best to convince the Unites States that it should accept negotiations with the PLO.

Alberta Matches People, Places

EDMONTON (CP) — If you are tired of fighting big-city traffic, high accommodation costs, an overcrowded business market and feel your talents are not appreciated, Alberta has a place for you.

Whatever your specialty — law, accounting, salesmanship or plain initiative — the provincial government is ready to help you realize your potential by putting you in touch with the small town or city that most needs your services.

Opportunity Alberta, a commercial development program which matches people with places, came into existence as a result of a program of the regional development branch of the government's business development department.

The program began two and a half years ago in an effort to create growth in rural Alberta, Ken Broadfoot, executive director of the regional development branch, said in an interview.

As well as examining the infrastructure of the communities involved — what basic services were needed to attract people and industries — and the industrial resource possibilities of each town, the project looked at the commercial possibilities of rural communities.

"We had a feeling it was important to attract young people to rural towns," Broadfoot said, and Opportunity Alberta was born.

By examining factors such as average age, incomes and demography in certain Alberta communities, the department was able to do some "interpretative guessing" at the buying power of those communities and what possible services might be welcomed.

A series of advertisements, listing business opportunities in various towns, were published in the major Alberta daily newspapers during the summer and fall, and 666 responses were received by the regional development branch.

"Six businesses have actually been started," Broadfoot said, including a motel in Milk River, a plumber in St. Paul and an accountant in Vermilion.

"There are 18 others under development and I expect there will be another 10 or so before it is finished.'

"On a whole, the quality of applicants was high," he said, with most in their 20s or 30s.

Interested persons would first talk to town officials and "things would begin to roll on their own in a free-enterprise system."

PanCanadian Petro.

Pan Canadian Petroleum Ltd., a Canadian Pacific subsidiary, has reported net earnings of $43.9 million or $1.41 per share for the first nine months of 1975, up from the same period last year.

Gross revenue during the period increased by $18.6 million to $111.8 million.

Pine Point Mines

Pine Point Mines Ltd. has announced net earnings for the nine months ended Sept. 30 of $12.5 million or $2.76 a share compared with $29 million or $6.43 a share for the same period last year.

Total income was $65.3 million compared with $102.5 million last year during the same period.

J. H. Salter, chairman and chief executive officer, said sales revenue decreased because of lower demand for lead and zinc concentrates.

At a meeting of the board of directors, R. P. Douglas was elected to succeed Salter as company president. Salter was elected chairman of the board.

Cdn. Cellulose

Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd. has reported 1975 earnings to the end of September, before an extraordinary tax credit, of $246,000 or two cents a share on sales of $26.4 million. Net earnings after the tax credit were $2.3 million or 19 cents per share.

In the corresponding period of 1974, earnings before the tax credit for the provincially-controlled company were $8.1 million or 66 cents per share on sales of $47.7 million. With a tax credit of $6.2 million, net earnings for the quarter were $14.3 million or $1.17 a share.

Ronald M. Gross, CanCel president and chief executive officer, said the company's pulp operation had been at a standstill throughout virtually the entire quarter due to the industry-wide strike of pulp workers.

Logging and lumber divisions were also closed for most of the period because of continuing poor lumber markets, he said.

MacMillan Bloedel

MacMillan Bloedel say that it has lost $19.5 million on its transportation operations for the nine months ended Sept. 30.

The company reported Friday that it lost $32.6 million for the three months ended Sept. 30, compared with a profit of $12.8 million in the same period last year.

The company's loss for the nine months amounted to $12.8 million compared to a profit of $63 million in the same 1974 period.

In a report to its stockholders, the company said the absence of forest products cargoes (because of a three-month strike in the industry) resulted in the loss, with vessels it has under charter having difficulty obtaining employment.

Playboy Enterprises

Playboy Enterprises Inc. said it formed a publications group headed by Executive Vice-President Richard Rosenzweig after earlier figures showed a multi-million-dollar loss by Playboy and Oui magazines. Its recent report for the fiscal year ended June 30 said Playboy's pre-tax earnings fell to $8.5 million from $14.2 million in fiscal 1974. Advertising revenues declined to $37.6 million from $40.3 million.

IAC Ltd.

Shareholders of IAC Ltd. have unanimously approved the proposed conversion of the finance company into a charter bank. A bill to establish the bank, to be called the Continental Bank of Canada, is before the Senate. Keith MacDonald, IAC chairman, told shareholders one of the main advantages of conversion would be more effective use of the company's $20 million in assets.

Xerox Corp.

Xerox Corp. announced Monday it will lay off about 500 salaried workers in the United States this month as part of a cost-reduction program. Xerox, the biggest maker of copying machines, said its production schedule will not be affected by the layoffs. Xerox said the layoffs will bring its employment in the U.S. to 53,000, down from 55,000 workers at the end of 1974.

The company's loss for the nine months amounted to

Deputy Retires

Three Victoria police inspectors were re-assigned and a sergeant promoted to inspector Friday when Ray Maitland retired as deputy police chief.

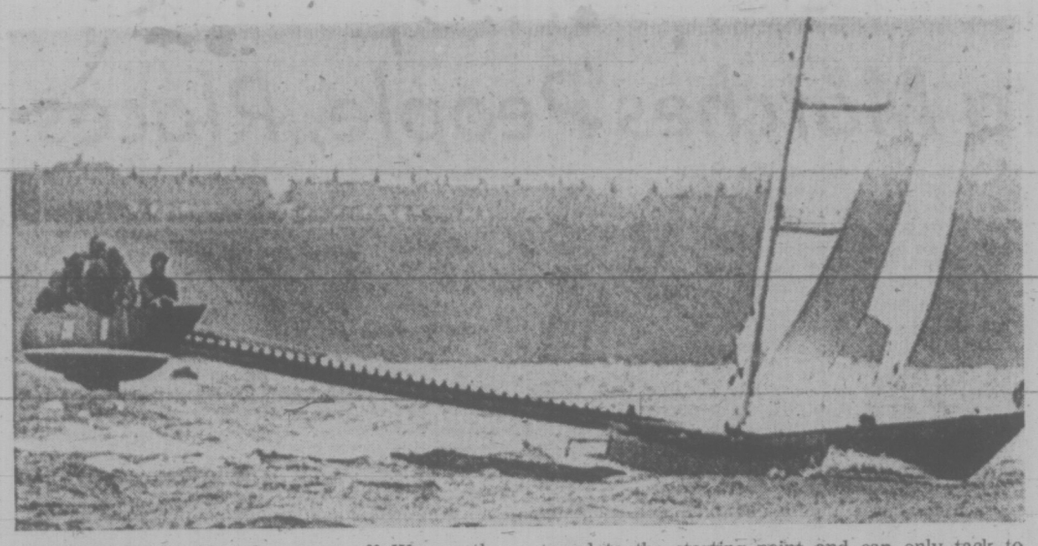
One of the moves made Inspector James Smith, 48, who has been with the force 25 years, officer in charge of administration under Chief J. F. Gregory.

Inspector Norman Bath, 58, a policeman for more than 35 years, takes over the detective division. Bath had worked in that division for 20 years and recently headed a uniform section.

Inspector Richard Ward, 55, who joined the force 28 years ago, will head the new traffic division where he worked for 15 years.

The department's new inspector is former sergeant Leslie Mottershead, 49, who rejoined the force in 1957 after an RCAF duty tour. Mottershead is well-known for his leadership of the Police Mutual Benefit Association committee which raises money for charitable groups.

One more change saw traffic constable Brian Hayes promoted to sergeant.



'FLYING PROA' rides the waves off Weymouth, England. The craft, called Crossbow, carries no crew but is controlled remotely by a four man crew in a sidecar known as an outrigger. Crossbow has to be towed to the starting point and can only tack to starboard. At recent speed trials, the 55-foot craft clocked 31.9 knots, nearly 36 m.p.h.

N.Y.C. REVIEWING ONTARIO CREDIT

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Ontario's triple-A credit rating in the world of finance is being reviewed by New York City investors.

The newspaper says Moody's Investors Service Inc. is reviewing the province's triple-A status and a decision will be made this week.

Ontario has a $300-million bond issue going to the New York market in less than two weeks and a drop to a double-A rating might mean about $1 million more in annual interest charges, the Globe and Mail says.

It says that by conventional rating measures, the province's standing has been deteriorating.

The newspaper says the Ontario deficit has continued to climb to $2 billion this year and that some rating people say the deficit has exceeded five per cent of the provincial budget for the last two years.

The Glove and Mail quotes Jackson Phillips, Moody's director of the municipal bonds division, as saying that a change in rating would be unusual but "these are unusual times."

Environmental Causes Blamed for Most Cancer

GENEVA (Reuter) — Strong evidence suggests that up to 90 per cent of human cancers are caused by the environment, a leading cancer researcher said Monday.

The medical world has long been trying to determine the role of different factors in human cancer-heredity, viruses or infection, and environmental influences such as air pollution and smoking.

Addressing a conference in Lyon, France, a director of the international agency for cancer research of the World Health Organization (WHO), Dr. John Higginson, said viruses probably play a direct role in only a limited number of tumors.

"There is good circumstantial evidence that 80 to 90 per cent of all cancers are dependent, directly or indirectly, on environmental factors . . . and at least 90 per cent of these factors are chemical in nature," he said. A summary of his speech was released by WHO headquarters here.

WHO announced during the weekend that cancer strikes about six million people throughout the world each year, killing five million.

Dr. Higginson told a three-day symposoum on cancer hazards that in most cancers, racial or hereditary factors are of little importance in comparison to the environment.

The importance of these findings justified the amount of research resources directed toward identifying the nature of these environmental hazards and indicated the possibilities of prevention through control or elimination.

Most of the agents entered the atmosphere more than 20 years ago and "it should not necessarily be assumed that the modern industrial environment is more dangerous than in the past," Dr. Higginson told the 150 participating delegates.

Western Brass Skilled

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Excellence of musicianship and technical command that gave the entire performance a sense of ease and security even in its most virtuoso phases, marked the UVic faculty recital by the Western Brass, Monday.

This ensemble of five — two trumpets, horn, trombone and tuba — is the department of music's resident quintet. All but tuba player Dean Monterey are members of Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

The others are Boyde Hood and Thomas Eadie, symphony principal trumpet and trombone, French hornist Joan Watson and Jeff Reynolds, trumpet.

Monday's six-part program was divided evenly between 20th century and baroque music. It opened with a chimmering weave of sound in fugue by J. S. Bach, edited for the five instruments by Robert King.

The balance and blending of the instruments produced a smooth and luminous effect, admirable in its fluency and skillful phrasing.

Virtuoso passages for each of the performers as well as lingering legato episodes in which tonal beauty was paramount, marked the five-part Centone No. V by 17th century Samuel Scheidt.

Four Fragments by contemporary composer Robert Turner are cameos revealing many characteristics of the bass instrument and its adaptability to many moods.

Throughout tone was clear and true, ornaments were superbly articulated; attack and sensitivity in the control of dynamics bespoke the professional and artistic quality of this fine ensemble.

RESIDENTS CHALLENGE OAK BAY LAND TRADE

Oak Bay's power to swap land at Anderson Hill park was challenged at an informal hearing attended by 36 residents Monday in the council chamber.

Council, which was going to give final reading to a bylaw authorizing a trade of half of undeveloped Calvert Crescent for four adjoining lots, referred the matter to its solicitor after questions were raised by lawyer W. L. Warner.

The next sitting of council will deal with the trade which raised spirited objections from some residents of the area.

Mayor Brian Smith, in adjourning further council discussion, said there had been "good representation, pro and con."

Controversy arose after Dr. E. H. W. Elkington, 572 Island, donated the four lots adjoining the west side of Anderson Hill property, an undeveloped area long used as parkland by residents of south Oak Bay.

Council later moved to close the undeveloped Calvert Road allowance between Island Road and a point about half way toward Earn Steet, which is also undeveloped and runs off Transit Road.

The closed portion was to be given to Elkington, whose property on Island Road it adjoins.

Warner, appearing on behalf of Ruth Jones and Mrs. Gwenllyan Quinton, of 599 Island, listed four objections to the deal: under the Municipal Act council has no power to trade for the purpose of acquiring land; there was improper notice to residents that a bylaw was being drafted; the matter of closing Calvert should be dealt with aside from the gift of four lots; the public interest is not well served by closing part of Calvert.

He said council's agreement with Elkington had negated the donor's gift. According to the Municipal Act, he said, council may acquire land through a gift, by cash or expropriation, but there is no authority to trade land.

As to procedure, he said the notice published by Oak Bay to meet legal requirements had made no mention of time, place or date of a hearing of the bylaw.

A comparison of the respective areas in the trade was not sufficient, Warner maintained. The portion of Calvert being closed "to me would be worth far more in dollar value than the four lots being traded," he said.

Finally, there had been no consideration given to parking.

The lawyer concluded that council "should consider adding the Elkington lots to the park by some other means."

Smith told the hearing that Elkington, as the adjoining property-owner, would be entitled to half the width of the closed access which is 40 feet wide.

B. C. Butler, 513 Transit, asked why Elkington was being given the whole width when he was entitled only to half.

"Because of the four lots," Smith replied.

Bette Botterell, 533 Transit, said the argument on both sides was obscuring "the real point," which she said was the protection of this "really beautiful property, a lovely piece of the municipality," which she hoped the council would find a way to do.

Dr. R. M. Lane, 500 Beach, also spoke of the natural charm of the area contained by the donated lots, providing a wooded walk not available elsewhere in Anderson Park and which had been enjoyed as a "wilderness area for 30 years courtesy of D. Elkington."

He said use of the area by children, adults and dogs probably went back 50 years. The lots contain a small ravine with a trail through it which leads up Anderson Hill, "and the park is more a park than without them," Lane said.

New Junta Seen

NEW DELHI (UPI)—Senior Bangladesh army officers met with civilian leaders Tuesday to discuss the establishment of a military junta to run their impoverished nation and to decide the fate of President Khondakar Musthaque Ahmed, Indian government sources said.

The senior officers seized power Monday, reduced President Ahmed to a figurehead role and arrested six of his top military aides.

The arrested officers, all majors in their 20s and 30s, were the men who masterminded a coup d'etat Aug. 15 that killed President Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, a hero of Bangladesh's war of independence.

Western diplomatic sources in New Delhi said Ahmed was still president but was probably powerless.

Western diplomats and Bangladesh sources in New Delhi said there was no indication that a new leadership has emerged from Monday's takeover.

Munro, Gruntman Open Old Wounds at Fed Meeting

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

VANCOUVER — The wounds incurred by the B.C. labor movement during this summers' forest industry dispute opened up again at the B.C. Federation of Labor convention here Monday.

The federation's executive council report touched off a series of bloody battles between the two major participants in the dispute and leaders of the federation.

The split between the International Woodworkers of America and the Canadian Paperworkers Union surfaced again on the floor of the convention as IWA leader Jack Munro and CPU head Art Gruntman sniped at each other and other delegates took shots at the non-affiliated Pulp Paper and Woodworkers of Canada.

The three unions started out this year's forest negotiations with a united front which quickly disintegrated when the pulp unions went on strike and the IWA did not.

Delegates criticized the leadership of the federation for even acknowledging the existence of the breakaway PPWC, and the United Steelworkers of America delegates called the union "power-hungry stooges."

Munro defended the IWA and said the strike by the pulp unions was a useless exercise. He criticized the pulp unions for picketing IWA operations. In some cases the picketing put IWA members out of work just before they would have become eligible for Unemployment Insurance benefits, he said.

Federation secretary treasurer Len Guy said federation officers had gone to Victoria during the forest negotiations to try to get a united front among the unions.

He said he did not condone some of the PPWC activities and said it was not the federation which first got involved with the PPWC.

The executive council report, which was firmed up at a reportedly steamy session of the council Sunday night, said that labor's unity had been undermined by some union members who defended the back-to-work legislation in public. The report singled out officers of the Port Alberni IWA local and a spokesman for the United Transportation Union as two of those who had undermined the solidarity.

"Clearly, if the labor movement in B.C. is going to be able to resist attacks by this or any other government, the membership of our affiliated unions and delegates are going to have to reject in the strongest possible terms the activities of those in our midst who defend the imposition of anti-labor legislation," the report said.

"Only when we have achieved the kind of united front which the federation eventually developed against the Mediation Commission Act will we be able to stop continued strike-breaking and anti-union activities by governments."

The report, while critical of both provincial labor legislation and federal wage controls, apparently reached the convention floor in a much watered-down version. The executive council was apparently split on the actions the report would urge, and the document came out as a compromise.

Another attempt to quiet dissenting voices in the labor movement, was passed Monday in the form of a resolution which instructs affiliates to refrain from publicly criticising the actions of the B.C. Federation of Labor officers through the media.

Delegates voted to endorse the executive council report.

Labor Bosses Close Ranks To Support Barrett

By LIZ HUGHES

VANCOUVER — When it comes to the crunch — a provincial election — labor in B.C. will support the NDP, but will carry on its fight with the party within the "family," labor leaders indicated here Monday.

The B.C. election call, announced midway through the first day of the B.C. Federation of Labor convention tempered labor's critical stance on the government's back-to-work legislation.

Comments from International Woodworkers of America leader Jack Munro, to the effect that labor must support the NDP because there are no alternatives, were typical.

"The government has to be much bigger than one bill," Munro said.

"There has been good legislation passed and we will be doing everything we can for the NDP. This campaign is not based on Bill 146," he said.

Debate on labor's support for the NDP revealed some schisms in the united support for the party but the crack does not appear too wide.

One delegate from the Canadian Union of Public Employees said the labor movement has learned in recent months "what happens when we go around issuing blank cheques to politicians."

Even labor's militants, like B.C. Federation of Labor secretary treasurer Len Guy, who called Bill 146 "our own government's treacherous anti-labor legislation" said all federation affiliates are urged to support the NDP but mainly because of the lack of alternative. "We're not about to support any of the so-called free enterprise parties."

"We have to weight all of the actions that affect working people. The NDP policy is right in line with labor and we will do our fighting within the party," Guy said.

The election call came right in the middle of the federation's legislative committee report which was highly critical of the NDP's labor policies, and called Bill 146 a "frenzy of political opportunism" which brutally aggravated the rights of working people.

The committee report urged all affiliates to devote more energy to the political arena and become active at the constituency level.

"Labor must make every effort to elect persons to the legislature that are committed to follow NDP policy.

"It is not sufficient to elect 'good guys,' and then withdraw from active participation in the party. Labor must fight for the implementation of NDP policy in all areas," the report said.

Federation president George Johnston got only a smattering of applause when he announced the election to the more than 500 labor delegates, but labor's favorite son NDP MLA Colin Gabelmann got a standing ovation as he ran up to the stage to make his pitch for moral and financial support for his re-election campaign.

"I need your help and I need your money and hopefully there will be more than three of us in the legislature who will support programs and policy of the labor movement," said Gabelmann (North Vancouver-Seymour).

Gabelmann and fellow NDP MLAs Harold Steeves (Richmond) and Rosemary Brown (Vancouver-Burrard) are the only government MLAs to vote against Bill 146.

The tenor of criticism of NDP policies changed noticeably after the election call was announced.

One delegate called the government "turncoats" but said that doesn't mean that labor should give up the party.

The federation's program of running labor candidates in ridings represented by NDP MLAs who voted for Bill 146 appears also to have been swept away by the election furore.

Federation president Johnston said the timing of the election will "inhibit" the nominating program of the labor movement. He said the federation had supported the NDP financially in 1972 and would do so again in 1975.

The only significant opposition to the support-the-party-crusade came from Canadian Paperworkers' Union leader Art Gruntman who said Premier Barrett and Labor Minister Bill King are still villains as far as the CPU is concerned. The CPU is one of the unions ordered back too work by Bill 146.

Gruntman said he would not direct his membership on how to vote but said his union would support the three NDP MLAs who voted against the legislation.

NIMSICK, RICHTER PLAN TO RETIRE

The longest-standing NDP and Social Credit members of the legislature will not seek re-election Dec. 11.

Travel Minister Leo Nimsick, the oldest member of the B.C. house and Frank Richter, the longest sitting Socred, announced their plans to retire before Monday's election call.

Daisy Webster (NDP—Vancouver South) also announced some time ago she would not seek re-election after serving three years in the house. The 64-year-old former school teacher was first elected in the NDP general election sweep of 1972.

Nimsick, 67, was first elected in the general election of 1949 and was returned to his Kootenay seat in eight succeeding elections.

Richter, 65, was elected in 1953 and has served the Boundary-Similkameen riding since then. As a member of the Socred cabinet, he held the posts of minister of agriculture, of mines and petroleum resources and of commercial transport.

40 Booths Planned To Aid Registration

the Dec .11 election are:

—Aged 19 or over;

—a Canadian citizen or British subject;

—a resident in Canada one year and in B.C. at least six months.

John Smallwood, deputy chief electoral officer, said other areas of the province may be registering in different ways, especially in the north where government officials may have to go into camps to register voters.

Smallwood said some registration centres have been established already in Victoria and electors can register starting Wednesday in the Hudsons' Bay, Eatons, Hillside Mall and Mayfair Shopping Centre.

If an elector fails to get on the list before Nov. 12 there is little chance they will be abie to vote.

All political parties have until Nov. 27 to nominate candidates and advance polling will take place Dec. 4, 5 and 6.

A heavy newspaper advertising campaign will be launched to inform people how to get on voters' lists.

In the past door-to-door enumeration has been carried out to bring voters' lists up to date in the months prior to an election. The last enumeration was in the summer prior to the Aug. 30 1972 election.

Four Parties Tramp Into Passing Gear

tion planning committee "and we have already been working on budgets and things of that nature."

Barrett opened his election fire Tuesday calling on the opposition to stop its negativism and say where it stands.

The election gives the opposition a chance to honestly say where it stands on all the NDP policies it has opposed over the last three years of government, said the premier.

"We know what they're against, what do they stand for?" he asked.

The premier, who said he feels relaxed and comfortable about the 38 days of campaigning ahead, again labelled the NDP the "underdog" in the coming election fight.

The government will be up against a huge Social Credit war chest with a continuation of heavy advertising, said Barrett.

But the NDP does not plan heavy advertising itself and the premier promised to look into government advertising plans over the next five weeks to ensure no unnecessary government ads are run.

The NDP has nominated 12; four more nomination meetings are scheduled for this week and Cocke said the rest should be held within 10 days.

A campaign committee meeting will be held today to hammer out the NDP's final election strategy, but Cocke said the 14,000 members of the party are always fairly ready for an election.

The Conservative party has already nominated five but party president Tony Saunders said the Tories would be better off if they had another six months before the election.

"We simply don't have the money the Socreds have ... we don't have any," he said.

Quality is more important than quantity, said Saunders, and the Tories may not have 55 candidates.

Gordon Gibson, leader of the liberal party, says he welcomes the election announcement and is ready to go to the polls with the 7,000 registered members of his party.

Gibson said in Vancouver, however, that he didn't agree with the timing of the election, as it will take place before redistribution of provincial electoral boundaries is complete.

"Redistribution is now substantially complete and it's a great pity that Barrett couldn't see his way clear to wait that extra week or two until the report of the redistribution commission could have been in the hands of the public," said the Liberal leader.

Gibson said he would like to have a public debate, either on television or radio before Dec. 11, and challenged Barrett, Dr. Scott Wallace, leader of the Progressive Conservative party, and Bennett to take part.

He said he does not expect his party to form the next government, but does expect to split the NDP vote and have a minimum position of balance of power.

Tory leader Wallace, who had planned a week's holiday in sunny San Diego after four months travelling the province, said he was stunned by the announcement.

The party would be better prepared in six months, he said, but all the constituencies are at least organized for an election although 55 candidates may not be found.

Wallace said he hopes the inflation issue does not force voters to lose sight of all the other important issues facing the province and the record of the NDP's three years in office.

The government's administrative record, labor-management relations, the Insurance Corporation of B.C., growth in the civil service and increases in government wages should all be uppermost in the public's mind.

Tories have a chance to win seats on Vancouver Island, said Wallace, and have strength in some interior ridings like Skeena, Similkameen-Bounday and Kootenay.

Reaction by labor leaders to Dave Barrett's election announcement Monday was one of surprise, with most leaders saying they would support the NDP party for re-election.

(See Page 11.)

The B.C. Teachers Federation (BCTF) probably won't campaign against the Social Credit in the election as it did in 1972, association president Bill Broadley said in Vancouver.

"It is my opinion that the BCTF will not support any one party or oppose any one party in the election," said Broadley, who also said he was not speaking officially for the federation.

He said the BCTF was in the process of determining its role in the next election and the executive will soon make a decision on its position.

He said a recent meeting of 100 delegates indicated the role (of teacher) should be one of criticizing specific policies, not of supporting or rejecting any one party."

Patrick Graham, provincial president of the Liberal Party, said his party had been sandbagged by the timing of the election.

"Barrett is very smart. If I had been his political manager I would have told him to go now," said Graham.

"I really think he's suckered us with that," Graham said. "It's good poker."

The Liberal president said all parties could have done with another three months preparation, but Barrett decided to move on political grounds.

"He has no real reason to call this election. I think all the real issues will be obfuscated. He's going to be attacking like crazy and giving away the moon."

The Liberals are ready, nonetheless, he said.

Habs Strike Late

MONTREAL (CP) — Yvon Lambert got a couple of handy deflections in the final four minutes for two quick goals that gave Montreal Canadiens a 3-2 victory over Buffalo Sabres in the only National Hockey League game Monday night.

Sabres goaltender Gerry Desjardins turned in an outstanding performance that had Buffalo in a 2-1 lead when, at 16:44 of the third period, Lambert fired from a sharp angle. The puck struck the stick of Buffalo defenceman Jerry Korab, glancing into the net.

"When I got the tying goal, I said, gee, some nights you're really lucky—I had a lot of chances," Lambert said. "On that one, I tried to pass it in front and it hit Korab's stick and it went in.

"I saw the top corner well," said Lambert of the winning goal 73 seconds later. "I tried to keep cool. Desjardins played a very, very good game tonight. He really impressed me.

"On the second goal, I think the puck hit Desjardins' stick. I just shot it right away because I knew I had that side."

Desjardins was still wondering after the game exactly how the puck got by him. "It hit something going across the net. Those things happen."

Gilbert Perreault gave the Sabres a 1-0 lead at 5:36 of the first period and Jacques Richard doubled the advantage at 18:47 of the second with a drive off the pads of Montreal goaltender Ken Dryden.

But the Canadiens came back just 20 seconds later as Jimmy Roberts took a goalmouth pass from Pete Mahovlich and banged the puck home from 10 feet out.

The Canadiens, who outshot the Sabres 35-24 over the game, came out hustling for the third period and bombarded Desjardins with eight shots in the first 3½ minutes.

But Desjardins, who robbed Jacques Lemaire in the first minute of the game and again in the 10th minute of the second period, was up to the task, foiling Doug Risebrough, Yvan Cournoyer and Lambert as they stormed his net.

Lambert's goals gave him nine in his last five games and 10 for the season. He had 32 last year after a six-goal rookie season the year before.

Lambert attributed his scoring streak to added confidence.

"I'm shooting more this year and I'm getting more confident. I don't allow mistakes to bother me now. I don't like them, but I don't get worried and afraid to make them."

PLUNGING IN head first and bottoms up, John Cappelletti of Los Angeles Rams scores touchdown during first half of Monday night's National Football League game against Eagles in Philadelphia. Rams took 21-3 lead by the midway point and went on to win, 42-3. (AP Wirephoto).

Rams Unload the Long Bomb To Teach the Eagles Respect

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Eagles showed Los Angeles Rams quarterback James Harris and wide receiver Harold Jackson no respect Monday night and it cost the Eagles dearly.

Harris explained it after the Rams dumped the Eagles 42-3 in a National Football League game before 64,601 booing home fans.

"We thought they weren't respecting Harold (Jackson)," Harris said. "They were just squatting on him, letting him go.

"We tried to earn a little respect by going long."

Before Harris stopped his bombing, he had thrown three touchdown passes, 54 and 30 yards to Jackson and 42 yards to Jack Snow. He completed 10 of 20 for 207 yards.

It was the sixth consecutive win for the Rams since losing their opener to Dallas Cowboys. Los Angeles, a preseason favorite to reach the Super Bowl, now leads the National Conference West by four games with only half the season yet to play.

Eagles' coach Mike McCormack, whose job may be in jeopardy, was distraught. The tight-lipped McCormack told post game interviewers:

"Gentlemen this is going to be short and sweet. We got our butts kicked by a very good football team. We didn't seem to do anything right. We couldn't execute our offence. It was a total collapse."

Eagles' owner Leonard Tose wasn't around after the game, but he uttered some ominous words during a halftime interview on radio.

"In seven years we haven't made any progress at all in my opinion," Tose said. "We're 1-5 and we're headed for 1-6, and that doesn't make me happy. We've slipped a lot."

Los Angeles took a 21-3 halftime lead on a one-yard run by former Penn State all-American John Cappelletti and Jackson's 54-and 30-yard touchdown receptions. The Eagles got their only score on Horst Muhlmann's 36-yard field goal.

In the second half, Harris threw 42 yards to Jack Snow, Fred Dryer ran 20 with a fumble, and linebacker Isiah Robertson intercepted a Mike Boryla pass and raced 76 yards for the last score.

Windsor Takes Suspension Of Quarterback to Court

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — University of Windsor has taken the fight over the eligibility of quarterback Dave Pickett into the courts.

A writ has been issued asking for a declaration by the court that a two-year suspension imposed by the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union (CIAU) Oct. 28 against the school is invalid, the spokesman said.

CIAU rules limit an athlete to a total of five years in all sports. Ontario Universities Athletic Association (OUAA) regulations permit five years in each sport.

Before transferring to Windsor this year, Pickett played for University of Saskatchewan teams for a total of five years, but used only thgee years of football eligibility.

No longer eligible for football at Saskatchewan last year, he did not play last season, serving instead as an assistant coach.

The university also will seek an order to permit its football team, if successful, to compete in the Vanier Cup final for the national championship.

Executive director Bob Pugh of the CIAU said late Monday night his organization had not then been served with the writ.

Windsor was suspended from national competition in all sports for two years by the CIAU.

Because of a difference between the eligibility rules of the CIAU and Ontario Universities Athletic Association, Windsor has been able to use Pickett in OUAA football games this fall.

He has quarterbacked Windsor to eight successive wins in the Ontario-Quebec Inter-collegiate Football Conference (OQIFC), but the suspension would prevent the Lancers from taking part in national playoffs.

Spectrum Uses Rally to Avoid Fate of Runners

Spectrum players must have been somewhat uneasy as they returned to the Royal Athletic Park pitch Monday after the halftime intermission.

Second-place finishers in the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League and favored to overpower Mt. Douglas in their semi-final playoff, they have been vulnerable on several occasions as the hustling Mt. Doug squad charged into a 2-1 lead and completed the half in a 2-2 deadlock.

Earlier they had watched Reynolds Roadrunners, winners of the Times Trophy as league champions for three successive years and unbeaten in league play for two season, go down to a 4-3 upset defeat against Oak Bay.

Qualms about following the Runners as upset victims were erased quickly by the agressive Spectrum attackers. Doug Vincent crashed through at 50 minutes for what proved to be the winning goal, Wayne Reeve boosted the margin to 4-2 at 64 minutes and Vincent was back with about five minutes remaining to erase the dwindling Mt. Douglas hopes.

In the first half, Julius Karpati, the league-leading scorer, kept Spectrum in the battle. Karpati notched the opening goal at 12 minutes and pulled his club into a deadlock at 36 minutes.

In between those two tallies, Mt. Douglas, using a long-kicking game and overpowering the Spectrum defence with fleet wingers, had appeared capable of fashioning a surprise triumph, taking the lead on scoring shots by Kevin Kendall and Chris Bridgman.

Mt. Douglas goalie Bruce Grey made some valiant efforts to keep his club in the running, but in the closing stages the Bays couldn't match the strength of Spectrum, which lost only once in league play this season, dropping a one-goal decision to Oak Bay.

In the first of the two semi-finals played before about 1,050 enthusiastic spectators, Oak Bay rallied from a 2-1, first-half deficit and knocked the Roadrunners onto the ropes with a pair of quick tallies early in the final session.

Charlie Fisher knotted the count two minutes after the intermission and Joe Mendonca sent the Bays ahead with a penalty goal. Then Louis De Frias, who had scored in the opening half, made it 4-2 for Oak Bay and set the stage for a desperate closing surge by Reynolds.

Clayton Booth was just wide of the left post on a hurried shot for Reynolds and Oak Bay defender Ron Anderson cleared the ball off his goal line before Keith Thompson, who scored all the goals for Reynolds, connected for his third goal of the game in injury time.

There wasn't enough time for the Runners to assemble another dangerous charge and they missed the playoff title for the second straight season.

Last year, they lost a 3-2 overtime decision to Spectrum in the final for the Colonist Cup, which will be up for grabs Friday night at Athletic Park when Oak Bay and Spectrum clash at 8.

Girls' Race Tightens Up

There was a change in format Monday during the seventh race in the Greater Victoria High School Cross Country League and an element of uncertainty entered one of the four categories.

Debbie Scott of Claremont, who won the previous six races, didn't compete in the 2.2-mile girls' test at Beaver Lake Park because of a sprained ankle and Julie Rainey of Belmont, one of her closest competitors, was also absent because of an illness.

Sharon Doherty of Esquimalt took prompt advantage to post a victory with a time of 13 minutes, 20 seconds and moved within eight points of Miss Scott in the individual standings. Miss Doherty was followed across the finish line by Cheryl Matthews of Esquimalt (13:50), Peggy Nelson of Dunsmuir (14:36), Carole Pickard of Esquimalt (14:54), Rebecca Staples of Esquimalt (15:07) and Donna Nichols of Dunsmuir (15:13).

Following Smith were Dave Whitehead of Claremont (21:34), Bill Barber of Esquimalt (21:55), Bill Noble of Esquimalt (22:11), Sean Cochlan of Esquimalt (22:20) and Randy Cox of Victoria (22:30).

'Who's Moving' Newest Theme in WCHL

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Questions around the Western Canada Hockey League today concern "who's moving?"

The definite answer won't be presented until shortly before tonight's game, but Victoria coach Pat Ginnell is expected to move Murray Bannerman into the Cougars' goal for the Memorial Arena encounter with Brandon Wheat Kings.

Bannerman, 18, is the netminder obtained last week from Winnipeg Clubs on a "make-good" basis. He dressed as the backup goalie when the Cougars defeated Brandon 6-2 here Saturday night and watched from the bench again Sunday in Kamloops when the Chiefs tagged Victoria with an 8-2 loss.

Gerry Simpson played in both weekend games, but Ginnell feels it's time to have a look at Bannerman.

For Brandon coach Dunc McCallum, the question may be who to move into Dan Bonar's spot if the Wheat King centre can't play tonight. One of Brandon's best performers Saturday against the Cougars, Bonar suffered a knee injury Sunday in New Westminster and is listed as a doubtful starter tonight.

Moving questions also have been asked of Ken Hodge and Harvey Roy.

Roy, coach and general manager, has fashioned Kamloops into a contender but a new owner of Calgary Centennials has invited Harvey to relocate. Roy has been offered the general-manager's post and part ownership of the Calgary club.

Roy's decision, one way or another, could be announced in Kamloops today.

Hodge, former coach of Edmonton Oil Kings, is among the unemployed. As such, he is a prime candidate to succeed Mel Pearson as coach of Flin Flon Bombers. Pearson was fired last week.

Hodge apparently can have the job if he wants it.

Another mover is Don Murdoch. Medicine Hat's flashy 19-year-old winger has shown a hot scoring hand in recent games and has become a strong threat in the individual scoring race.

Murdoch has counted eight goals and eight assists in his last four games to take over third place, one point behind Bernie Federko of Saskatoon and two behind the leading Jim Gustafson of Victoria.

HARVEY ROY
. . . Calgary is calling

Gustafson's 39 points include 16 goals. Federko's total of 38 includes a high of 21 goals. Murdoch shares third place with Blair Chapman of Saskatoon, the leading playmaker with 25 assists.

Rookie Carey Walker of New Westminster is the league's top goalie with a 3.06 goals-against average. Mark Earp of Kamloops is next in line with a 3.41 average.

BURNING HEART, just off the early pace, challenged for the lead from the outside of QUISTA POW leaving the stretch turn and defeated that one in a stretch-long duel. QUISTA POW set all the early pace from along the rail and just failed in a good effort. JACKS CRYSTAL BALL rallied into contention from the outside on the stretch turn, but was unable to sustain his bid. MECAPO saved ground much of the way and had nothing when called on for the real test. TIVOL'S SON tired. Start good, won driving.

CHEWED SHOE was to the outside down the backstretch, took command from PROUD SKIPPER entering the stretch turn, and won as the rider pleased. PROUD SKIPPER was three rivals wide on the first turn, held the advantage down the backstretch, was no match for CHEWED SHOE, but finished well for the place. PACIFIC RUBY had speed, but gradually weakened. McLEOD BREEZE was through shortly after completing a half-mile. McNOON saved ground to no avail. STRATUSFACTION had only brief early speed. A Jock's Agent Picks His Spots

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Okay, so what's a jockey's agent in thoroughbred racing?

Well, simply, he's the fellow who picks the mount for his boy, or boys and, for 25 per cent of what those jockeys do, that's how he makes his living at the race track.

Terry Jordan is a jockey's agent. At Sandown Park he also works for the video film patrol. In the off-season he's an electrical contractor, his own, and he readily admits he can make more money in the electrical business.

Then why does he work as a jockey's agent?

"I guess I just enjoy the sport," he said. "And no, I don't bet, not very often, perhaps only about 10 times a season."

At Ex-Park this past season, Jordan had Garth Carter, Danny Sanchez and Craig Miller in his book. At Sandown he has Carter and Miller who currently are Nos. 1 and 2 in the jockey standings.

"I have to know who can beat who," he explained, "or who I ehink can beat who; and if I see a horse who can run good, then I might go to the trainer and say I think I have a boy who can win. You just do what you think is best."

About 20 years in the business, once as a rider in the bushes, Jordan admitted "there is a lot of luck involved," but that "a lot of trainers ride agents, not the jockeys."

And if you have two or more boys, how do you differentiate?

"You have to kind of equal things out," he admitted; "and sometimes the jockeys get mad at you. They think you are giving the break to another rider. And then sometimes you are looking beyond one day to another. And sure, one agent sometimes tries to steal a boy from another. I don't do that myself, but it's done. I have to think of next year."

Jordan also explained that this year he took off Music Theme for Air Flyer. Music Theme went on to have a good season at Ex-Park and Air Flyer tailed off a little. "Over here he's had a new lease on life, so you never know."

He's had Carter for two years now. As an apprentice in 1974, Carter led his category with 62 winners. This year he was among the top 10 with 63. "And I hit it lucky," Jordan admitted (the words "I" and "We" being synonomous in horse-racing venacular).

"He won two stakes with Blue Thumb, $35,000 and $15,000, and also a $20,000 event on Indian Count. So he had a good finish and so did I."

"Carter," he added, "could become one of the best at Ex-Park. He is modest, minds his own business, is not afraid of work, and is quiet and workmanlike in his job."

And how would he rate Monday's card and "his" chances before the races?

There was no hesitation. "We win the first," he said, the "we" being Carter on Earl O Moray and Miller on French Love. They ran one-two. Just then Comic Way was announced as a track scratch in the second. "We win that, too," he said, pointing to Burning Heart, with Carter up. And Burning Heart, odds-on, was a handy winner. The third? "We have a chance," he declared. That chance resulted in a second by Carter on Proud Skipper and a third by Miller on Pacific Ruby.

The fourth? "I think we win," he allowed, and Miller did just that on Sammy Spats. Carter was second on Dark Monkey. In the fifth he said "the race will probably be between Young Hopeful and Charles Dore." Miller was on Charles Dore. So he missed. Intentress won and Roadside Chapel was second for the biggest quinella of the day, $57.80. In the sixth he had nothing going, but selected Cape Dyer, who ran down the line, Why Beeb, ridden by Mark Walker, winning.

The seventh was predicted as a battle between No Help and El Escorial, the latter with Carter up. No Help won it, paying $4.60 and El Escorial ran third. Gypsy Jewel, with Miller up, was second. And in the eighth another "good chance". And good it was, Miller bringing Y.B. Wise down in front.

For the day, Jordan (or Carter and Miller) between them had four wins, four seconds and three thirds.

Which, besides being a successful day, gave Carter 17 victories for the meeting and Miller, an apprentice from Prince George, a total of 12. They are one-two in the jockey race.

Otherwise, a crowd of 1,684 contributed $134,532 to the mutuels on a warm, partly sunny day, for a change.

It was also announced that directors of the Capital City Turf Club, in a moment of generosity, had decided to award a trip for two, by draw, to members of the backstretch contingent only, in appreciation of the work done under the adverse weather conditions at the meeting. Elsewhere, as on Saanich Inlet Sunday, gate superintendent Jack Edwards with a 7¾ pound coho and Dr. Pat Talbot with a 5¾-pound spring salmon won the two events of the Sandown Fishing Derby. Times handicap for Wednesday is on page 2.

Pair Paces Bucks

Keith Dixon and Randy Krantz scored two goals each Monday to boost Victoria Western Homes Buckaroos to a 5-2 decision over James Bay Athletic Association Canadians during a Big Six Hockey League game at Memorial Arena.

GOLF
ernie fedoruk

Even if it means Cec Ferguson can do nothing else when he gets to South Africa, Victoria's amateur golf champion intends to look up Darold Kemp.

That will complete a full cycle.

The possibility of a reunion is one of the things that excites Fergie, who leaves Victoria this Friday to join the rest of Canada's Commonwealth team for the trip to South Africa and the five-nation tournament.

When Canada played host to the Commonwealth matches for the first time, the 1967 show went to Victoria Golf Club. Ferguson, then 17, got in on the act as a caddy for Kemp, a member of the South African team.

"I never thought I'd be playing in the same tournament," said Ferguson, "and in South Africa yet."

"The first thing I'm going to do when I get there is to look up Kemp."

The Canadian team leaves Toronto next Sunday for Johannesburg. The six-man team will get a chance to work out travel kinks during a two-day tournament in the South African capital, then will move on to Durban for the Commonwealth matches Nov. 18-22.

The Canadians will compete against their hosts, Great Britain, New Zealand and Australia in scotch foursomes and singles matches.

Ferguson, 25, will join Doug Roxburgh, 23, and Jim Nelford, 21, both of Vancouver; Ken Tampke, 25, of Edmonton; Robbie Jackson, 20, of Montreal, and Dave Webber, 28, of Nova Scotia.

Ferguson thinks it is a good team.

"We've got to be excited," he said Monday. "Five of the six of us are playing in international competition for the first time. Roxburgh is the only one with international experience.

"But the big thing about the team is that we all know each other. If you check those ages, there isn't much difference. Even Roxburgh will be better because of the similarity in our ages.

"When Doug first played in an international tournament, he was only 19. He went with one golfer who was 42 or 43, and with a couple in their 30s. Roxburgh didn't play as well as he could, and I think the age difference had an effect."

Fergie was scheduled to be transferred to the mainland this fall but had second thoughts and quit his job with a poultry firm. He wasn't anxious to move to Abbotsford, and he also admits the South African trip influenced his decision to quit his job.

With time available, Ferguson has played golf everyday since becomeing unemployed. As a result, Fergie feels his game "has improved since summer."

The next order of business, therefore, is to look up Darold Kemp.

Top Money in Evergreen Taken by Sparks Quartet

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Berny Sparks rink from New Westminster, won the top money of $2,400 Monday in the final round of the ninth annual Evergreen tournament of champions.

Sparks, the former world curling champion second man for Ron Northcott of Calgary, led his rink to an 8-6 victory over the Brent Giles rink of North Vancouver.

Sparks had as his team three comparative newcomers to competitive curling, Bert Gertzinger at third, Al Cooke at second and Bob Lachance at lead.

Giles had veteran third man Leo Hebert with his own brothers Brock and Brad, playing second and lead respectively.

The Giles rink picked up second-place money of $1,200.

Third place money of $700 went to Glen Pierce of Maple Ridge, who defeated Jake Block of Abbotsford 9-7. Block's rink won $500.

The remaining prize money from the total of $5,600 went to four other rinks which qualified for Monday's championship round.

Tourney Won By Lansdowne

Lansdowne, which won the Greater Victoria junior high school girls' field hockey title in undefeated fashion at the weekend, will lead a contingent of six schools from the area to the Vancouver Island championships this weekend in Duncan.

Other teams entered from the Victoria area are: Cedar Hill, Colquitz, Arbutus, Belmont and Royal Oak.

Earlier, Giles eliminated Lynn Mason's rink from Burnaby 8-6.

Sparks eliminated the Jim Armstrong foursome 6-4, Pierce sidelined Keith Dagg of Victoria 7-3 and Block stopped Gary Sigurdson's Cloverdale quartet 8-6.

The tournament committee selected an all-star team of Sparks as skip, Gertzinger as third, Jim Heintz second and Brian Bettesworth at lead.

DENIAL OF SHIFT HABIT FOR HULL

WINNIPEG (CP) — Bobby Hull said Monday he is getting tired of being asked whether he plans to return to Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League.

"Yes, unequivocally no, I'm not going back to Chicago! OK?"

That was Hull's response when asked to comment on a report that he might leave Winnipeg Jets of the World

Cutler's Kicking Records Were 'Taken for Granted'

TORONTO (CP) — The final weekend of play provided Western Football Conference stars a last-ditch bid to shatter several Canadian Football League marks and they rose to the occasion.

The Calgary running back ran the ball for 238 yards against Winnipeg in his team's final game to give him a season's total of 1,896 yards, breaking Earl Lunsford's record of 1,794 yards, set by the former Stampeder fullback in 1961.

Burden also carried the ball 332 times, tying the all-pro record of O. J. Simpson and beating the CFL mark set the previous week by Saskatchewan's George Reed. Reed, who held the earlier carries mark of 302, set in 1967, finished this year with 323.

Elusive George McGowan, Edmonton Eskimos' outstanding pass catcher, set another CFL mark by hauling in nine passes against British Columbia Lions and bringing his season's total to 97 one more than Terry Evanshen caught for Calgary in 1967.

But probably the records most taken for granted among this year's record-breakers were those of Edmonton kicker Dave Cutler, who, without benefit of a touchdown, established a CFL scoring record of 169 points, including a league record 40 field goals.

The scoring record he erased the previous week was 148 points, set by Hamilton Tiger-Cats' Tommy Joe Coffey in 1969, while he topped the single-season field goal mark of 36, set last year by Ottawa's Gerry Organ, with four three-pointers in the Eskimos' final league game.

TWO-YEAR CONTRACT FOR CAL

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cal Murphy has accepted a two-year contract to coach the British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League and Bob Ackles a similar agreement as general manager, club president Doug Johnston said Monday.

Johnston declined to disclose financial details.

Murphy and Ackles assumed their positions Aug. 29 when the Lions had a record of one win and five losses under head coach Eagle Keys and general manager Jack Parker. The Lions won five games and lost five to finish the year with a 6-10 record.

Murphy said he and assistant coaches Ken McCullough and Dick Zornes will leave on scouting trips in the U.S. and Canada immediately.

Newcomers Enter CFL Hall of Fame

HAMILTON (CP) — Four players and two builders have been inducted into the Canadian Football League Hall of Fame.

The players were halfback Dick Shatto of Toronto Argonauts, quarterback Ken Ploen of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, fullback and defence-back By Bailey of British Columbia Lions and tackle Herb Trawick of Montreal Alouettes.

Honored as builders were Tom Brook, who brought Calgary Stampeders out of the doldrums in the late 1940s, and Lew Hayman, president of Toronto Argonauts.

Shatto was signed in 1954 by Frank Clair, who was then Argo coach, and still holds 13 team records. He is now marketing and media manager of the Argos.

In 11 seasons with Winnipeg, Ploen led the Bombers to three wins in five Grey Cup games, all of them against Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Bailey was one of the original members of the Lions when they were formed to join the CFL in 1954.

Trawick, who was named to the Kentucky State Hall of Fame last month, was signed for Montreal by Lew Hayman in 1946 and remained with the Alouettes for 12 years.

The Stampeders were floundering when Brook hired Les Lear as head coach in 1948. Calgary had a 25-game unbeaten streak under Lear and won the 1948 Grey Cup that year.

Hayman, who came to Canada in 1932 to help coach basketball at University of Toronto, coached five Grey Cup winners. He was with the Argos until 1946, when he moved to Montreal, then returned to Toronto in 1956.

Unitas Settles

BALTIMORE (AP) — Former national Football league quarterback John Unitas and Baltimore Colts have reached an out-of-court settlement of Unitas's $725,000 breach-of-contract suit, both sides announced Monday.

Neither the team nor Unitas would discuss details of the agreement but John Steadman, sports editor of the Baltimore News-American, reported that they settled for "around $100,000."

The suit stemmed from a clause Unitas had in his Colts contract before he was sold, at his request, to San Diego Chargers in 1973, a year before Unitas retired after 17 seasons in the NFL.

Davis Signing Leaves Ex-Argos Bitter

TORONTO (CP) — Two Toronto Argonauts who played out their options with the Canadian Football League team this season reacted bitterly Monday to the million-dollar contract given Anthony Davis.

Middle linebacker Sam Cvijanovich and Canadian centre Stew Francis become free agents June 1, along with Canadian defensive back Roy Beechey.

The Argos announced Monday that Davis, a star running back in U.S. college football and the defunct World Football League, had signed a five-year agreement worth $1-million.

Cvijanovich, CFL rookie of the year in 1974, took a 10-per-cent cut in his option year, earning $12,600.

He said he couldn't have afforded to play for the Argos had the parents of team-mate Ernie Carnegie not provided him with free room and board.

The Argos' final offer for next year was $24,000, the linebacker said. He is asking for a salary "in the high 20s."

This year's minimum salaries in the CFL were $10,000 for rookies and $11,000 for veterans.

"Either they're just not interested or they don't think I'm worth it," said Cvijanovich.

"I don't know what my plans are for next season. They've made me an offer and they say that's it."

Francis, who tore knee ligaments in Toronto's final game of the season Saturday, said he was on the verge of signing with the Argos last week when the club was in the middle of negotiations with Davis, but he has decided to "think a little more and talk to them again."

"I have nothing against the guy, but when they sign someone like Davis for $1-million and then you look at the kind of money we're talking about, such a small sum, it makes you wonder," he said.

Francis said Beechey visited him in hospital Monday and feels "much the same way I am, very much so."

Senior Boxers Decision Juniors

London Boxing Club Seniors extended their unbeaten streak to four games Monday night and moved into first place in the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League by posting a 52-46 victory over London Boxing Club Juniors at Royal Oak Junior High School.

Duff McCaghey led Seniors with 15 points and Jam MacKay added 12. Thad Norman was the top scorer for Juniors with 12 points.

Victoria Swimmer Qualifies

VANCOUVER — Bob Grundison of Victoria Amateur Swimming Club turned in the top performances by Victoria entrants last weekend at Vancouver in the first of a series of Level I swim meets to be held in the province this winter.

With contestants attempting to match or better qualifying times for entry into the winter national championships and Olympic trials, Grundison qualified for two national events as he placed second in the men's 200-metre breaststroke and third in the 100-metre freestyle. He also placed third in the 100-metre butterfly.

Among other Victorians, Judy Newman of Juan de Fuca Cohos and Karen Rushcall, VASC, each finished second in a women's final while Bruce Kelly, Cohos, and Janet Rushcall, VASC, were third-place finishers in age-group contests.

Peter Dobson of the New Westminster Hyack club, won five events in the 11-and-12-year division and Steve Pickell of Vancouver Dolphins was a four-time winner in senior competition.

TOWN TALK

To the 1,537 people who sat for 192 days (at three hours each) in the Royal Theatre last night soaking up Bucky Fuller: Don't be surprised hat an 80-year-old man kept you all up past bedtime.

Before delivering his cosmic opera, and demonstrating his geodesic Tinker Toys, Fuller (who comes across like a mind-blown Leo Nimsick) took a long nap. And, says Mene Brereton lecture series promoter Charles Barber, the old gent eats maybe four or five meals a day.

Before the talk Fuller dined at Antonio's with Dave and Shirley Barrett who sat onstage — with Bucky and the premier winding up the night in a bear hug of mutual admiration. Afterwards at Smitty's, Fuller was visibly pleased to be the object of much hugging, handshaking and autograph hunting.

He'll be back in May after William F. Buckley, Linus Pauling, John Kenneth Galbraith and Ralph Nader — all confirmed for the Brereton series.

Knock, knock. Who's there? You just never know, as this story going the rounds proves once again.

A local woman answered a knock at her door one rainy morning last month to find a couple, strangers to her, standing there.

"I'm Paul Newman," said the man, "and this is my wife Joanne. Could I use your phone to call a taxi?" Seems they had been out for a walk and got caught in the rain.

The woman agreed but then had some second thoughts, so the story goes, about having these strangers in her house. So she asked them to wait on the porch. That fellow's steely blue eyes didn't ring any bell of recognition.

So Butch Cassidy rode off in a cab with his talented wife, Joanne Woodward. And all movie buffs who dream of such an encounter got stung.

Mayor Peter Pollen found himself in a brush with the law, both inside and outside the Imperial Inn last week.

While Pollen, the chairman of the Victoria police board, was testifying at an arbitration hearing on the pay hassle between the city and its police department (arguing, as usual, that city policemen shouldn't be paid as much as they want to be paid), a city official rushed in, interrupted the proceedings and asked for the keys to the mayor's car.

The illegally parked vehicle was about to be towed away, he explained.

A short while later the official returned with the keys. His fortuitous intervention had saved Pollen the tow-away fine. But he was clutching one of those familiar little scraps of paper — a parking ticket!

Yes, but what's a diener?

It's a European title applied to pathology assistants which has become common in Canadian hospitals in recent years, explains Mike O'Brien, director of employee relations.

All of which caused Dr. Weichmann Billung-Meyer, the hospital's chief of staff, to chuckle when the board approved the move last week. He's not sure the title will do anything for labor-management relations because diener translates simply as "servant."

MacPherson probably won't mind. It means greater responsibilities and an increase in salary.

Looks as if Saanich and Oak Bay police stations are going to be busy for a couple of Saturdays, booking in scores of young bookworms.

It's no sudden increase in juvenile crime, but a program for youngsters aged nine to 13 laid on by the Greater Victoria public library.

Library spokesman Pat Murphy says the idea is for the kids to meet at the libraries — the Oak Bay branch Nov. 15 at 12:30 p.m.; the Saanich-Victoria (Town and Country) branch Nov. 29 at 2 p.m. — and then stroll to the police stations to see how real live cops operate.

They'll see the police radio in action, be fingerprinted . . . and no doubt ask lots of questions.

One can only wonder what Attorney-General Alex Macdonald — a man well known for his wry sense of humor — had in mind when he approved a menu for a luncheon his department gave to delegates to the Pacific Northwest Organized Crime Conference at The Empress last Wednesday.

The entree was "poached" salmon, B.C.'s finest. Not a complaint was heard from the hungry crimefighters.

Whether Canada should have a heroin maintenance program is a conundrum in which politicians and senior civil servants do not enjoy wallowing.

But the question comes up every now and then, and they're forced to make some response.

Last week it was posed to deputy attorney-general David Vickers.

No, he hasn't changed his mind, he said. He's still skeptical it would be effective and besides it would be totally unworkable unless it was initiated at the federal level.

Two minutes later reporters came across federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde.

What are his views on heroin maintenance?

He hasn't changed his mind either. He doesn't think it would work and besides such a program would be a provincial responsibility, so why ask him?

When told Vickers had just said the impetus would have to come from the feds, Lalonde replied in his clear and clipped French accent:

"Sounds like a case of buck-passing to me."

Truck drivers, customs officers and other habitues of the "breakfast club," who have been gathering at the Princess Mary Restaurant's coffee shop for 20 years, are going to have to get used to a new look.

Closed for renovations, the coffee shop is expected to open next week, the counters removed and replaced with tables and new carpeting.

A restaurant spokesman said removal of the counters is necessary to get a licence to serve liquor and wine. Breakfast club members, like Sandy Ormiston, insist they prefer the old look of the coffee shop, which first was used as a canteen for the shipyard employees of "Mr. Tugboat," the late Harold B. Elworthy, who bought the old ship and converted her into a restaurant.

Here Today Gone Tomorrow

It was a time for carrying rather than wearing sweaters today as temperature climbed to 19, warmest November day locally in more than 30 years. Deborah Beach and Keith Gage-Cole gave two-year-old Terra Hanna a swinging ride down the breakwater at Ogden Point to mark the occasion while dog named India was left panting. Some sun is forecast for Wednesday but with it traditional November will be back with predicted temperature of 12.

Centennial Tree Decor For the Birds

When the idea was conceived several months ago by Mayor Peter Pollen it sounded simple, attractive and fairly inexpensive: merely stringing a few lights from half a dozen trees in Centennial Square.

But that was before the engineers and lighting experts got into the act.

Today they presented their estimate of the total costs — capital expenditure totalling $28,000 plus hydro costs of about $9,600 a year.

Result? End of idea.

Faced with a bill of that magnitude, the city's public works committee decided that arboreal adornment was strictly for the birds.

The main snag was that the extra power load would have meant installing new power lines and feeders to the six trees, with "outlets and breakers" on each of the adjacent lamp standards.

Cost for that little item alone was estimated at $20,000.

In addition, the city would have had to pay $2,000 for 6,000 lamps and 300 strings; $4,000 for replacement lamps (burning out at the rate of once every three months); and $2,000 for installation and labor costs.

Oh yes, and hydro costs would have been $800 a month based on an eight-hour daily lighting up period.

But perhaps tree illumination in the square won't be entirely abandoned — for Christmas at least.

The committee instructed officials to examine costs involved in erecting a Christmas tree, the former tradition which was abandoned on economy grounds last year.

City engineer John Sansom was also asked to come up with ideas for titivating the Government Street Mall for the Yuletide season.

FISHER

College Stalls Tuition Hike

Camosun College will shelve its proposed tuition fee increase for students until budget discussions are held later this month, council decided Monday night.

Council agreed to wait until there is clarification of community college budget guidelines announced last week by Education Minister Eileen Dailly which hold budget increases to 15 per cent.

Proposed tuition increases "to straighten out inequities" would have raised to $300 tuition for academic technical and vocational students, said college principal Dr. Grant Fisher.

Fisher drew up an alternative proposal at the meeting which would have maintained academic tuition at $250 a year and brought vocational students, now paying $150 a year in line with their counterparts. But councillors felt a tuition change which could be further altered by budget considerations would not be fair to students.

The principal said he was "annoyed" that Dailly had seen fit to step in and dictate budget decisions for community colleges.

Parents Protest Closure

A parents meeting has been called to protest the Greater Victoria school board's proposal to close Burnside Elementary school next June.

Part of an "older schools" policy, the board intends to channel the current 180 students in Grades 1 to 7 to nearby Tolmie, Blanshard and Tillicum elementary schools.

The parents' meeting starts at 7:30 p.m. at the Burnside gym and school board representatives are expected to attend.

Bikeway Bucks Abound

With any luck at all senior government grants and programs will bear most of the estimated cost of $42,500 for developing Victoria's portion of the proposed regional bikeway system, city aldermen were told today.

City engineer John Sansom informed the public works committee that prospects appear reasonable for nearly $36,000 of the total bill to be financed by the Capital Improvement District Commission, the province's community recreational facilities fund and the Local Initiatives program.

The committee, meanwhile, endorsed traffic officials' proposal to construct a portion of the special route for bicyclists on the proposed northward extension of Vancouver from Pandora to Caledonia, at an estimated cost of $6,000.

Land for the highway extension has been acquired over a period of several years, but the city has decided that instead of pushing the artery through to Saanich it will serve more as a downtown bypass route.

Instead of the original 46-foot width required, therefore, only 33 feet will be needed for two lanes of traffic.

Traffic division chief Derek Wild explained that this would allow room for a five-foot-wide landscaped area and a four-foot-wide bicycle path.

The path will "meander" through the boulevard to provide variety and cut down on two-wheeled speeding.

Major Housing Developments Clear Hurdle

The first official step toward two new major apartment developments in Saanich were taken at Monday's council meeting.

Three readings of a bylaw were passed, declaring the San Sebastian Motel and Victoria Auto Court properties on the Gorge a development area.

An application by J. A. Traunweiser envisions 212 units, predominantly apartments, being built on the nine-acre site.

Ald. Sandy Noel suggested the bylaw readings be tabled until a study of sewer services in the area is completed.

He and the rest of council were told by municipal engineer Cliff Warren that the study would be complete in 30 days.

Municipal planner Gil Laurenson said the developers hoped to proceed as soon as the necessary services are available. He added in a deal worked out with Saanich, frontage on the Gorge would be given to the municipality as a greenbelt area.

On the recommendation of Laurenson, the council also agreed to take the necessary action to make a 10-acre site on Lucas Avenue a development area.

Laurenson said architect John Di Castri proposes to build 101 units of attached housing, ranging from two to four bedrooms, and a centrally located social centre on the site.

"The density of the project would be 10 units to the acre, which is moderate for attached housing use, and the project is professionally designed and would be well located," Laurenson told council.

Illegal Killing Nets $100 Fine

Birch, of 5062 West Saanich, pleaded guilty to the charge under the Stock Brands Act after officials found nine beef carcasses, four pork sides and two lamb carcasses on the premises Sept. 30.

He admitted to police he had slaughtered five animals in the past 10 days.

"The meat was not for sale. It was for the farmers' own use," Birch told the court.

Police said nearby residents had told the meat inspector they had contracted with Birch to "custom kill, hang, cut and wrap" their meat.

Birch told the court he had been warned about the same offence one year ago, so Judge William Ostler levied more than the minimum fine.

The accused said some of the meat found by inspectors on his property had been legally slaughtered because it carried a government stamp.

Bar for Sports, Not Tipplers

Aldermen endorsed the philosophy that the lounge is open on an interim basis to provide adult users of the sports complex with bar facilities 6-11:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 6-12 Friday.

It is only for those who actually use the centre themselves, or who take a member of their family to an activity in the centre, Mayor Brian Smith said.

This policy will be reviewed in the new year, he said.

Meanwhile a policy is being developed for booking the lounge by organizations.

In a related matter, council upset a recommendation by finance committee that residents of Goldsmith Street adjoining the recreation centre be given a one-time pass to the centre in recognition of the inconvenience caused during construction and with heavy traffic since the opening.

Residents had asked for a two-year pass for each person, since the construction had taken two years and they will be bothered with traffic and parking problems into the future.

Committee had been afraid of setting a precedent that would be claimed by people living adjacent to other community recreation facilities, and agreed with the token pass for a single admission.

Ald. Douglas McLelland said he could not agree with the request or the recommended solution. He said a three-month pass would be more appropriate.

He was supported by Ald. Douglas Watts, who said, "If we are going to do anything we should do something worthwhile."

$600 Boost for Council

Oak Bay council embraced federal wage-price guidelines, and in the next breath moved to raise salaries of mayor and aldermen by $600 Monday night.

On a motion by Ald. Douglas Watts council adopted the wage restraint formula limiting raises to 10 per cent a year, except where there are anomalies such as a worker getting more than his supervisor. The vote was unanimous.

Mayor Brian Smith then said council indemnities had not been adjusted since February 1972 and other areas were paying more than Oak Bay, mentioning Esquimalt particularly.

He said there should be aldermanic raises now that employee negotiations were well behind them, but he disagreed that they should be paid more every year.

The next raise should be approximately to the level of Esquimalt, he suggested or $600 including $200 expense money. That will make annual salary $3,000.

SAANICH AWARDED Donna Lawrence, 15 of 5217 Beckton, a special commendation Monday for putting to practice what she had learned at a fire department course for babysitters. The citation acknowledges her alertness when fire broke out in a home at 5198 Lochside Oct. 25. She smelled smoke, discovered a fire in the rumpus room and led Cheryl Andrews, 5 and Larry Andrews, 7, to safety in a nearby home where she notified firemen.

Home Sale Advice

DEAR ABBY: A couple whose youngest child left for college asked your readers to help them decide whether or not to sell their big home.

I say, sell while you can still get your price! We didn't. We kept waiting for our kids to come home for a visit. It was always the same story: "Too busy. Maybe next year."

The one in college chose to spend Christmas with her boyfriend's family!

We finally wised up and sold it for what we could get. — Poor Timing.

DEAR ABBY: Sell now! It's better to move to a strange place where you know no one while you are together. I suggest a retirement community where all others have been uprooted and are eager to make new friends. Choose a place where each of you can pursue new interests and hobbies and prepare for that day when one of you must carry on alone. — The L's.

DEAR ABBY: Sell! Sell! Sell! Store what furniture you want to keep, buy a camper and take off, leaving no forwarding address.

Hold hands, sleep late, make love and enjoy each other. Buy some great clothes, go dancing cheek to cheek, then come home if you want to. And never let your children use you as a free babysitting service or a place to go for a free vacation. — Orengonians Who Did It.

DEAR ABBY: Sell the house and get into something cheaper and easier to care for. If the kids come, put them up in a nearby motel. Even if you have to pay for it, it's still cheaper, and they won't stay as long. — Canadians.

DEAR ABBY: I've worked with college students for 15 years, and I would advise parents not to sell their homes until their youngest is through college. Until that time, children desperately need a home to come back to, and it should be there whether or not it's made use of. — Santa Barbara.

DEAR ABBY: Hang on to your home even though your children are gone. We have six grandchildren who come to visit us the day school lets out, and they stay all summer. If we had sold our big, five-bedroom home and moved into a small apartment, we'd have missed some wonderful dividends. — The G's.

DEAR ABBY: Would you like to hear what our parents did after their kids left home? They sold their big house and now they visit each one of their six married children for two months every year. They said, "We took care of you; now you can take care of Us! —The Kids.

Weaver Grows with Woollens

RHYDLEWIS, Wales (CP) — Ten years ago, with the revival of the Welsh woollen industry, Mrs. Kay Poulson and her son Roger started a weaving business in the village of Llandyssul.

Today she has 15 looms and employs dozens of home workers for her mill, Curlew Weavers, named after the curlew bird, which is the family trademark.

The mills surrounding Llandyssul are open to tourists who are able to watch the weaving process and buy the products in adjacent shops.

At the time Mrs. Poulson started her mill, the Welsh woollen industry had been in a precarious situation.

For although in early times weaving in Wales enjoyed prosperity, the Depression of the 1930s forced many mills to close.

In earlier days the weaving was done in cottages scattered over the countryside.

Most small farmers were growers of the sheep, spun the wool and wove it into fabric. Servants were hired not only to work in the fields but also to weave.

By the end of the 18th century, with mills going full force, the Welsh cloth industry reached its most prosperous period. But it was almost entirely dependent upon exports.

After the Depression, the cottage industry and about 25 mills continued to supply merchandise to the craft shops in the larger towns for the tourist trade.

The investiture of Prince Charles as Prince of Wales on July 1, 1969, and the influx of foreign visitors for that occasion stimulated the industry.

That year the Welsh Weavers Association was set up to develop the sale of pure wool cloth woven in Wales through craft shops, in holiday resorts, in the United Kingdom and overseas.

Their first task was the creation of the Welsh woolmark, the Red Dragon of Wales, side by side with the international woolmark.

Welsh woven wool cloths range from freize, tweeds and flannels to tapestries. Actually, tapestry has become the darling of the industry.

Recently, Mrs. Poulson has begun to design fashions. One of her suits combines a wool tapestry jerkin and striped wool pants. Another is a fisherman's wool smock with dropped shoulders and wide sleeves. For evening, she has fashioned a lined evening dress in a leno weave in bands of color on the skirt.

OIL EATING BUGS DISCOVERED

A collection of 500 different species of microscopic animals were discovered in the Caspian Sea and taken for examination to Alma-Ata, the agency added.

Scientists think about 40 organisms hold promise for cleaning the sea naturally of oil spillage and leaks of kerosene and other petroleum products.

CHAMBER RAPS COMPANY ATTITUDES

Disabled Not 'Welfare Bums'

MONTREAL (CP) — Many employable handicapped persons are unable to find work because of the ignorance or negative attitudes of companies, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce said in a recent report.

"Welfare rolls are swollen by handicapped persons who are far from being 'welfare bums' but yet have not been able to find any work," the report said.

"Estimates for reducing the welfare rolls paid for by our tax dollars, through employment of handicapped individuals, range as high as 40 per cent."

The report said 90 per cent of Canada's 45,000 paraplegics are unemployed yet 33 per cent of them are employable and anxious to work.

"In Vancouver, it was found that 27 per cent of deaf persons and 18 per cent of the blind were unemployed; yet more than half of these persons were employable in the regular labor force."

Interviews with handicapped persons revealed that they were often unable to find employment because of "the attitudes of personnel officers, the physical barriers in many work places, problems of transportation and by a general lack of awareness of what they can do."

In a survey of 482 com- 50 per cent of respondents indicated they had hired men- of transportation and by a parties across Canada, about tally or physically handicapped persons.

In most cases, employers found handicapped workers to be as satisfactory as or even better than regular workers.

For example, 143 of 211 respondents said the level of production of the physically handicapped was considered the same as that of regular employees; 32 said production was better and 23 said it was worse.

In most cases, handicapped persons had attendance records the same as or better than those of regular workers. The majority of handicapped workers stayed at a firm for the same amount of time as or even longer than other workers. The quality of work was also rated highly.

The three most frequent reasons cited by companies for not hiring the handicapped were that no jobs were suited to disabled persons, that none had applied and that the job was too dangerous.

The chamber was able to discredit such theories.

After the Second World War, the veterans affairs department was able to place successfully 95 per cent of the disabled veterans in the regular labor force with a resulting high degree of employer satisfaction, the chamber reported.

Workmen's compensation boards, the veteran affairs department and the United States health, education and welfare department all report that handicapped workers' safety records are significantly better than average.

Employers also indicated ignorance concerning government aid programs for companies wishing to hire the handicapped.

Some workmens' compensation boards have funds to subsidize necessary structural changes in a work place and will provide wage subsidies.

Canada Manpower will also pay up to 85 per cent of a handicapped employee's wage for a full year.

By DR. WILLIAM J. WELCHS

If excessive saturated fat in the diet, especially fat of animal origin, and food rich in cholesterol are related to the high incidence of heart attacks among American men and women, a logical conclusion would be to eliminate such foods from the diet of infants and children.

This would mean, among other restrictions, allowing infants only skimmed milk rather than fat-containing whole milk.

Young mothers and doctors whose advice is sought in the care for small children have been concerned because official bodies such as the Inter-Society Commission for Heart Disease Resources and the American Heart Association have recommended to the general public certain dietary modifications. These include reduction in total dietary fat, saturated fat and cholesterol intakes, with the aim of preventing atherosclerotic vascular diseases — popularly called hardening of the arteries.

Other groups have recommended such dietary intervention only for persons whose blood levels of fats are elevated, either because of excessive fat in their diets or because they are subject to an hereditary inability to deal normally with a fatty diet.

It has been reported that a high dietary cholesterol intake can increase the concentration of cholesterol in the blood of so-called normal men.

However, it is also true that the ability to "digest" cholesterol and other fats in the diet, without allowing them to pile up in the blood stream, appears to differ between "normal" persons and those with an hereditary deficit in their ability to metabolize overloads of fat in the diet.

In infancy and early childhood, the need for calories and essential fatty acids may very well be inadequately met if skimmed milk is substituted for whole milk, and other difficulties may also occur.

In the opinion of experts in nutrition, the only occasion for feeding infants and small children skimmed milk instead of whole milk is in those children who are shown by chemical testing of their blood to have an inherited disability to handle such fats in their diet.

It would be well, however, to remember that as children grow older and fall into the contemporary anytime "snacking" that has taken the place of regular meals, they will find them running counter to the advice of nutritionists of all persuasions.

French fries, fat-laden hamburgers, sugar soft drinks and junk sweets may very well undo the best efforts of any campaign to lower the blood fats of tomorrow's candidates for premature heart attacks.

Millworkers Out in N.B.

The action by Local 689, Canadian Paperworkers Union, followed a meeting Saturday in which 96 per cent of the membership favored a strike to back contract demands.

The union earlier rejected an offer of a 16 per cent increase divided evenly over two years.

Hogs Natural Tendencies Can Be Put to Good Use

AN UNINSPIRING mop bucket becomes an exciting means of transportation for 4-year-old Kim Fillion as brother Danny, 9, provides the propulsion near their home in Ottawa.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®

The various animals kept on a farm have natural tendencies that can often be put to good use. One fine example is the distinctive habit of the hog: he roots up the ground — lifting and turning the soil with his strong nose — in a constant search for food.

Anyone who keeps a few pigs for meat can utilize the creatures' urge to dig by fencing them into a small area for a few days, where they're allowed to plow or till a garden, work up a grassy plot of future planting, or clear a weedy, brushy piece of land for use as pasture.

The garden, right after harvest time, is an excellent place for pigs: they make good use of cull produce, fertilize the area with their rich manure and work up the ground to that minerals in the subsoil are well mingled with the topsoil's organic matter.

New gardens planted over former hog lots are often very productive, and if you can't move the growing area, you can get the same effect by bringing in the pigs themselves for a visit at the end of the growing season.

Before you take such a step, of course, you must be sure the garden fence is hot-tight; if there is no fence, you'll have to build one. Electrically charged wires are easy to set up and — properly installed — will turn any pig. If you have a charger, it's a good way to go. Otherwise, woven wire at least 32 or 36 inches high is satisfactory.

The smaller the plot's area, by the way, the higher the barrier around it must be, because pigs become steadily more determined to escape as their living space is restricted. You may also need to run a strand of barbed wire along the bottom of the fence, or nail boards next to the ground, to help keep the rascals from squirming under.

You should think about housing for your "hired hands," too. The pigs should have a temporary shelter during their stay in the garden, especially if the weather is on the nasty side. This can be a portable wooden structure, a quickly made hut of strow bales or anything else that does the job of keeping the animals warm and dry.

How many pigs should you sign up for your gardening crew? Well, one or two, if that's all you own. But if you keep a larger herd and have a choice, a couple of large hogs or perhaps four or five younger animals will handily plow a medium-sized garden. The more concentrated the creatures are, the sooner the job will be done.

A pigpen that is located fairly near the garden makes for convenience at moving time. The animals can be transported in a hog crate or lured in with food.

Once there, they run around the enclosure for a while and look it over. Then they begin to chomp on vegetables and wees, and soon they're tilling the soil and improving the patch with their valuable manure.

If plenty of waste vegetables are available, the hogs won't need much additional feed during their visit — but they will need their usual amount of fresh water.

The practice of letting hogs prepare land is almost as good for the gardener as it is for the garden. The porkers help stretch your time and labor by doing the work, and they save you gasoline, too, since — once they've been over a piece of land — you probably won't need to plow it with a tractor or tiller.

Meanwile, of course, you're economizing on whatever you normally feed the animals. And if you were going to give them the waste vegetables anyhow, letting the pigs help themselves spares you the labor of picking and hauling.

Finally, you'll find few bothersome weeds in the patch come spring — the swine have either buried them or turned them into meat.

But what about the hogs? Well, they win too, what with plenty of vegetables and fresh roots to eat, valuable trace minerals to absorb from the soil, a clean living space, fresh air and plenty of exercise (plus the fun of rooting to their hearts content).

If you have hogs and a vegetable patch that needs digging, put the two together and watch the work get done. The soil will benefit; you'll save time, trouble, and money; and the pigs will be happier, healthier and heavier from their stay in the garden.

Men's, Women's Brains Compared

AUBURN, Ala. (UPI) — An Auburn University psychology professor says she has found that the brain functions of men and women are not equal, but each has advantages and disadvantages.

Dr. Julia Hannay said her research into brain function differences between males and females shows that environmental conditioning and genetics account for the variations.

Men have a better concept of space and how they relate to it, she said, while women who lose their speech due to damage from strokes to the left side of the brain recover faster than men.

She said the brain function differences do not imply that either sex is superior in intelligence. She said men and women do not differ on composite tests of ability and standard IQ tests.

Dr. Hannay said her research shows that the right side of the brain of women is almost as capable of assuming verbal functions as the left side.

She said men do not have this ability for the left side to take over for the right side in the matter of verbal recovery. In males, she said, "the left side is dominant for retention of verbal materials."

Ballot Replaces Violence In Que. Labor Struggle

QUEBEC (CP) — Violence among Quebec construction workers seems to have diminished this year following the introduction of new laws aimed at cleaning up the unions.

For the first time, Quebec's 149,000 construction workers will choose their union affiliation by secret ballot.

Voting begins today in the James Bay area and in other centres Friday. Results are expected Sunday.

The ballot, preceded by a 30-day union publicity campaign, is one of several major reforms proposed by the Cliche commission following its year-long examination of the industry.

The vote will determine which of four competing union federations will act as bargaining agent in industry wide negotiations which begin early next year.

Following submission of the proposals by commission chairman Judge Robert Cliche May 2, the government passed four laws setting new ground rules for the industry which are are designed to curb union and employer abuses.

Legislation barring persons convicted of a crime from holding union office — a ban lasting from five years to life, depending on the seriousness of the offence — has eliminated much of the violence in the Quebec Federation of Labor's (QFL) construction wing which htd been judged the worst offender on the union side.

As recommended, trusteeship was imposed May 22 on five QFL locals which the commission had found the most corruption-ridden.

Under the new laws, the Quebec Construction Authority was set up as an independent regulatory body to administer the secret ballot, wages and working conditions and job placement in the industry.

The same law that created the construction authority stipulates that a union association must represent at least 50 per cent of construction workers in all fields to be recognized as bargaining agent.

Competing union associations besides the QFL are the Confederation of National Trade Unions (CNTU), the Centrale des Syndicats Democratiques (CSO) and a 700-member group which recently splintered from the CNTU in a dispute over ideology and the allocation of funds, the North Shore Construction Union of Sept-Iles.

For the 1973 negotiatons, figures show the QFL represented 72.1 per cent of the construction workers in Quebec. The CNTU was said to have 22.5 per cent and the CSO, 5.4 per cent.

Jean Bernier, professor of industrial relations at Laval University, said recently that 31.4 per cent of the province's construction workers were not counted in that tabulation because they illegally held membership in more than one union or because they were not registered with the Construction Industry Commission, the forerunner of the new construction authority.

Now, all construction workers must register their choice of union. They will later be issued with a card which will identify their union allegiance and serve as a work permit.

Although the law provides for union associations to form alliances to reach that 50-per-cent level but the QFL has already rejected any possibility of forming a common front with its main rival, the CNTU.

China Denies India Claim On Ambush

By ROSS H. MUNRO
Special to the Times

PEKING — The Chinese government Monday night completely rejected India's charge that Indian troops were ambushed and killed by Chinese personnel within Indian territory late last month.

The Chinese statement was notable not only for its rejection of Indian charges but also for its restrained tone, which indicated that China does no want an escalation or continuation of border troubles with India.

A foreign ministry spokesman said Indian troops entered Tibet, part of Chinese territory, on Oct. 20 and sparked an incident by provoking and then firing on Chinese civilian check-post guards. The Chinese then fired back, killing four Indian soldiers.

The spokesman said India's charge that the Chinese had ambushed Indian soldiers "well within Indian territory" was "a sheer reversal of black and white and confusion of right and wrong."

However, that is as strong as the Chinese statement gets. It concludes with the observation that "we hope that the Indian government will take effective measures to ensure against the recurrence of similar incidents in the future."

There were serious armed conflicts in this part of the Sino-Indian border region in 1962 where, according to most Western accounts, Indian troops crossed over the de facto border into Chinese territory and provoked a Chinese counter-attack which drove the Indians well south of the de facto line.

Chinese troops now are back behind the de facto border which both sides often refer to as the "line of actual control." In some sections of the border there is confusion because the line of actual control is south of Indian territorial claims. But in the Tulung Pass, where this incident occurred, the line of actual control coincides with India's border claim.

The Chinese claim the true border line should run substantially south of the line of actual control but most Western observers treat this as a bargaining position which the Chinese are prepared to modify substantially.

B.C. BUSINESSMEN RAISING OLYMPICS $

MONTREAL (CP) — Roger Rousseau, president of the Olympic Games organizing committee, announced Monday a plan whereby British Columbia businessmen will raise $1 million toward assisting the staging of the 1976 Summer Games.

Herb Capozzi, chairman of the group, the British Columbia Olympic Association, and a former player with Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference, said $500,000 will go the Olympic flame program. The rest will be used as the Games revenue department sees fit, except that it cannot be used for building Olympic facilities.

The B.C. group, which includes Mayor Art Phillips of Vancouver, will seek provincial government help in approaching industries and municipalities in the province for funds.

"In launching the program," Capozzi said, "we made it clear that the money received will not be used in construction of Olympic facilities. People at home are still very disappointed and this feeling is expressed in an unwillingness to grant to Quebec help or a subsidy which they failed to get themselves."

B.C. twice tried to win the Winter Games for Vancouver-Garibaldi, but they will be held in Innsbruck, Austria, next year and in Lake Placid, N.Y., in 1980.

"The public will be interested," Capozzi said, "as we have to realize that 61 per cent of the Canadian delegation to Munich for the 1972 Summer Games was made up of athletes from the West."

The sixth series of Olympic coins was inaugurated as well, featuring designs showing boxing, soccer, fencing and field hockey. Japanese artist Shigeo Fukuda received $5,000 for the winning design.

Fire Trap Hazard Denied In Olympic Cycle Stadium

MONTREAL (CP) — The city of Montreal says acrylic roof panels in the Olympic velodrome may save lives rather than endanger them.

In a report sent Monday to the Quebec department of labor, the city denies claims by fire experts and the Dow Chemical company that the cycling stadium could become a fatal fire trap if the roof catches fire.

City spokesman Christian Dagenais said Monday that city laboratory tests have proven the composition of the roofing sheets — Ethafoam sandwiched between acrylic — is "no more dangerous than acrylic alone."

Dow Chemical Co. of Canada Ltd. produces the polyethelene foam under the trade name Ethafoam, but company officials have warned that the material has not been adequately tested for fire resistance.

Dagenais said the city collected information from a fire disaster on the Isle of Man in 1973 which shows that the acrylic roof of the Summerland Leisure Centre relieved rather than augmented the effects of the fire. Fifty-ozne persons were killed and the blame was originally placed on acrylic construction materials.

The city report quotes the secretary of a company which supplied acrylic used at Summerland as saying:

"Oroglas the type of acrylic used was unlikely to have been directly responsible for any of the deaths and may have been responsible for the survival of one of the persons trapped in the gallery area."

The true cause of the fire, the city's dossier says, lies with the dangerous design of the Summerland structure.

Mr. Dagnais said that the Velodrome can be evacuated in five minutes.

The acrylic panels, composing 70 per cent of the roof area, have already been installed in the $68 million building.

Testing Kits 'Inaccurate'

OTTAWA (CP) — Some of the newly developed products used in diagnostic tests for illnesses are potentially dangerous, says Health Minister Marc Lalonde.

"To remedy this, appropriate regulations and standards are being developed," he told a recent Ottawa conference on medical devices.

The tests are those done in hospitals and laboratories to establish or confirm the diagnosis of illness. Most are performed with commercially prepackaged "in vitro" kits, so-called because much of the work is done in glass test tubes.

"Although most of these provide direct benefits, a significant number are potentially hazardous, ineffective or unreliable," Lalonde said. "Inaccurate results obtained with them may lead to improper therapy, increased mortality, morbidity, lost work hours and higher costs due to prolonged hospital stay."

A Canadian Press story Oct. 21 gave the erroneous impression that Lalonde was the source of a statement that between 25 and 50 per cent of blood tests made with such kits are inaccurate. In fact, this statement was made by Dr. Eloise Eavenson of the United States Food and Drug Administration in an interview.

However, Dr. J. E. Logan of the health department's laboratory centre for disease control told the conference that tests of the products made by the laboratory showed "slightly less than 50 per cent were acceptable on the basis of our testing criteria."

PWA Probe Urged

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Alf Nunweiler, minister without portfolio responsible for Northern Affairs, has called for a federal investigation into profit mismanagement and defaulting on licence obligations by Pacific Western Airlines.

The airline announced Oct. 31 it was dropping service to several small northern communities.

The service between Prince George, Vanderhoof, Smithers, Terrace, Prince Rupert and Sandspit was dropped by Transprovincial Airlines, subcontractor for the service.

"They (PWA) don't seem to have any responsibility to provide service in the small intermediate stations . . . (they) don't seem to be interested in that because they are marginal runs," Nunweiler said Monday.

"They're interested in the gravy lines."

Nunweiler said he wants the service continued by PWA until an application to take over the route by Northern Thunderbird Airlines Ltd. is finalized.

The Prince George chamber of commerce, city council and PWA have backed the NT air application, but no reply has been received from the Federal Air Transport Commission.

Donald Watson, president and chief executive officer of PWA, said Monday that Nunweiler didn't know the facts of the situation.

"Perhaps the honorable minister shouldn't be expected to know what is going on, but he should have been cautious and checked the facts before making his statement," Watson said.

Watson said PWA had subsidized the routes for about $300,000 a year. The subsidy would have risen to $500,000 this year because of a decrease in traffic volume due to the extended forest industry dispute and decline in the mining industry, he said.

He also said the company applied for a federal subsidy from the Canadian Transport Commission, but that after an extensive examination by the commission, the request for a subsidy was turned down.

Jailbreakers Get 20 Years

VANCOUVER (C P— Three British Columbia penitentiary prisoners were sentenced Monday to between eight and 20 years on charges stemming from a jail escape last year.

Mr. Justice Kirke Smith sentenced Gordon Andrews, 22, Larry Marshall, 39, and Vincent Fitzgerald, 21 to 20 years each for attempted murder and eight years for attempting to wound a city police constable and a deputy sheriff.

Andrews and Marshall were also sentenced to 12 years for armed robbery and Andrews one year for escaping custody.

Mr. Justice Smith said the sentences must be served after their present sentences have been completed although they may run concurrently.

Court was told that on Nov. 19 five prisoners were being taken by elevator to the city police department jail, by Constable R. H. Robinson and deputy sheriff Allan Druskin.

Another prisoner, Robert Hume, who has since died, took a revolver from Robinson and forced him to unlock the handcuffs and legchains on the prisoners. The fifth prisoner refused to take part in the escape.

Fitzgerald broke away from the others, who ordered a cab driver to stop. The man, Rupert Lee, accelerated and the men shot at his taxi.

Andrews approached a car driven by William McCoid of Kamloops. He ordered McCoid out of the car and when he hesitated, Andrews shot him in the shoulder. He fled and joined the other two, who had commandered another car.

The men were later recaptured.

Fishery Men Plan Action On Supply

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nearly 150 fisheries experts from Canada, Japan and the United States met Monday at the opening day of the International North Pacific Fisheries Commission annual convention.

The convention wants to draw up a mutual program for the protection and restoration of depleted fisheries resources in the North Pacific.

Canadian and U.S. officials said unilateral measures may have to be taken to impose a 200-mile offshore fishing limit.

"Clear consensus for an extension of coastal state economic jurisdiction to 200 miles is emerging through the Law of the Sea Conference," said E. E. Rasmuson, chairman of the U.S. national section of the commission.

"The majority of the world's nations is moving in this direction."

He quoted U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger as saying the U.S. will negotiate interim arrangements with other nations to conserve fishing stocks until 200-mile zones exist.

Rasmuson said the U.S. government's objective is to reduce foreign fishing to restore and maintain fishing stocks.

"We urge continuance of area-time closures to trawling in the southeastern Bering Sea to protect the important halibut resource," he said.

"We also urge the curtailment of high seas gill-netting for salmon on the basis that it is wasteful and contrary to effective management."

Similar views were expressed by D. F. Miller, spokesman for the Canadian national section.

"Canada was pleased with the voluntary measures taken by the Japanese government last winter to help protect halibut stocks in the Bering Sea," he said. "Continued protection is essential to the survival of the fishery in a commercially vaible way."

He also urged that steps be taken to protect salmon stocks originating in the Yukon River from capture in the high seas fishery.

"Significant numbers of these stocks originate in the Canadian section of the river," he said, "and contribute heavily to its over-all production.

"Important native food and developing commercial fisheries rely on these stocks."

Sessions will continue in camera until Friday when a progress statement will be released.

Crippled Cop, Robber Rebuild Lives

MONTREAL (CP) — Former police officer Douglas Lyons and Leopold Veronneau met five years ago in a bank —looking down each other's gun barrel.

Moments later both opened fire. Veronneau and three other robbers pumped more than 60 bullets into the bank. Lyons hit Veronneau twice before he was cut down in the hail of machine gun fire and crippled for life.

It was the beginning of what was to become a relationship transcending the cops-and-robbers relationship. Lyons, who was forced by his injury to leave the police force, and Veronneau, currently serving time for the robbery, have met several times since that first violent encounter, finding a mutual inspiration to rebuild their lives.

While Lyons was lying in a hospital bed struggling to find the courage to resign himself to his fate, Veronneau was in his cell reading about other bank holdups.

"It really depressed me," Veronneau says.

"I saw that I had ruined my life for a handful of dollars and here I was, with nothing but myself."

During the first years behind bars, Veronneau contemplated suicide several times but found inspiration from reading newspaper articles about Lyons and the guts the crippled man showed as he fought to put his own life back together.

Now Veronneau telephones Lyons every few months to see how he is progressing while Lyons has even signed Veronneau's parole application in the belief that the convict's stay in prison has given him "time to think, the same as me."

Guy Lemire, director of Cowansville penitentiary, regards their relationship as "bizarre" and believes the two shouldn't see each other again so they can "forget the past and start over."

But both men feel there is more than just a truce between them.

'New York Will Never Lie Down'

NEW YORK (AP) — One New Yorker has put his sentiments about the city's fiscal crisis into a 14-storey electric sign in Times Square which reads: "President Ford, New York Will Survive."

Alex Parker, owner of One Times Square, is featuring several other such messages in the world-famous electrically lighted headlines which girdle the landmark triangular building.

They include "Give 'Em Hell, New York;" "President Ford, New York Never Will Lie Down and Die;" "Listen, President Ford, New York Will Never Give Up," and "New Yorkers, We're the Greatest City in The World."

MAYOR'S SOLUTION: JUMP IN THE RIVER

NEW YORK (UPI) — The mayor of Auckland, New Zealand, has no doubt how he would handle New York City's financial problems:

"If I were the mayor of New York," says Sir Dove-Myer Robinson, "I would jump into the Hudson River and get it over with as soon as possible."

PROTEST DISRUPTS PAGEANT

TORONTO — Miss Nova Scotia, Sylvia McGuire of Halifax, won the Miss Canada pageant Monday night.

McGuire, a 20-year-old student majoring in French and education at Dalhousie University, said she plans a teaching career.

Mary-Lu Zahalan, 19, of Oakville, Ont., was first runner-up, Shelley Sherman, 20, of Calgary was second and Barbara Berezowski, 21, of Toronto third.

Marie Colbert, 18, of Sarnia, Ont., won a $1,000 award and trophy in the pageant's talent competition.

Just before the winners received their crowns a woman jumped on to the stage and attempted to wrest a camera from a technician, said a Metropolitan Toronto police officer who was in the studio at television station CFTO in Toronto.

He said two other women attempted to cross the stage in front of the cameras but were stopped by contest officials.

The women, and about 10 others who were in the studio but did not reach the stage, appeared to be protesting the contest, he said.

They threw pieces of paper printed with the words Happy International Women's Year to members of the audience as they walked from the studio entrance to the stage, he said.

Miss Canada doffs her crown

NEW YORK — Indian Yogi Sri Chinmoy said he wrote 843 spiritual poems in a 24-hour period and then remained awake several hours longer to see the book come off the presses early Monday.

The 44-year-old yogi, head of the United Nations Meditation Group, said the book, called Transcendence-Perfection, surpasses his previous record of 360 poems in one day last April 28.

CINCINNATI — Rabbi Baruch Korff, a staunch defender of Richard Nixon, says America will one day want to atone for its "sins" against the former president.

"I have a vision that one day this nation will create a day of atonement to atone for its sins against Richard Nixon and his administration," Korff said in a speech.

BUENOS AIRES — President Isabel Peron appears ready to govern Argentina from her hospital bed despite an acute gall bladder ailment.

A presidential spokesman said Mrs. Peron showed "notable improvement" late Monday and signed several government decrees although doctors have prescribed complete rest and barred visitors.

New FM Debuts On CBC

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC's new satellite-supported FM (frequency modulation) radio network made its debut Monday.

The affect was of three, four, five and six-channel sound in place of the normal left and right sound of stereo.

After introductory remarks by A. W. (Al) Johnson, CBC president, from Signal Hill in St. John's, Nfld., where Marconi's first trans-Atlantic broadcast signal was picked up, the CBC presented a showcase of programs to come in the months ahead.

Then it broadcast a 2½-hour performance of the Canadian opera, Louis Riel, by Harry Somers and Mavor Moore of Toronto, performed last month at the John F. Kennedy Centre for the Performing Arts in Washington as part of Canada's cultural salute to the bicentenial of U.S. independence.

The new network connects CBC-FM stations from St. John's to Victoria. Stations along the way are equipped to pick up the signal.

Programs are distributed by computer so that all of them are heard at the same time in each region — although 30 minutes later in Newfoundland because of that province's half-hour time difference from the standard.

Moore, professor of dramatic arts at York University; Toronto composer Norma Beecroft; and CBC announcer Harry Mannis were among those introducing the showcase variety of stereophonic broadcasts.

The new network program schedule features a 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. program on the liberal arts with Peter Gzowski as host, and a 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. program of popular classical music.

Ideas, at mid-evening, will present discussions of current popular and academic subjects, and late in the evening there will be programs of classical music and jazz.

CIA Plot Report To Be Released

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Ford has lost a major fight with the Senate in his efforts to prevent release of a report that would for the first time document publicly how the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) plotted to kill foreign leaders.

In voting to release the report, the Senate intelligence committee Monday rejected almost unanimously President Ford's claim that disclosure of political assisination plans by the CIA would damage U.S. foreign policy.

The committee vote was coupled with strong criticism of Ford's firing of CIA director William Colby, who was held in high regard by many in Congress — including members of the Senate intelligence committee — even if his agency's actions were not.

Senator Frank Church, intelligence committee chairman, said Colby's dismissal was an attempt to obstruct the inquiry into alleged abuses by the U.S. intelligence community.

Wage-Price Watch Eyed

WASHINGTON (FP) — A permanent but independent wage-price commission to administer selective control policies is recommended by a leading United States economist in a study published here Monday by the prestigious Brookings Institution.

The recommendation by Arnold Weber is made in his summary of a review of wage-price policies conducted in the U.S. over the last 30 years by five presidential administrations.

Soviets Had No Use For Schlesinger Line

RUMSFELD

MOSCOW (WP) — Nowhere else in the world is the departure of James Schlesinger from the U.S. defence department likely to be as closely watched — or as warmly received — as in the Kremlin.

To the Soviets, Schlesinger was a powerful and persuasive opponent of detente in the highest reaches of the Ford administration. Publicly, Moscow assailed the defence secretary's policies and privately, Soviet officials voiced alarm at each sign of his apparently increasing influence.

Specialists at Kremlin think-tanks like the U.S.A. Institute and the Institute for International Relations and World Economics have been carefully following reported differences between Schlesinger and Secretary of State Kissinger for nearly a year.

These experts believed that to a large extent the future course of Soviet-American relations depended on whether Kissinger's approach to bargaining with Moscow prevailed over Schlesinger's harder-line stance.

The changes in Washington will also provide some badly needed good news for those in the top Soviet leadership arguing that detente, along the general lines of recent years, should be reaffirmed at next February's 25 Communist party congress.

Whether the Schlesinger resignation will lead quickly to a "breakthrough in the SALT talks is hard to predict. But there is no doubt that Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev wants the pact — and the summit signing in Washington —completed by the party congress.

Schlesinger's dismissal sent a sudden and unexpected jolt through the West German defence ministry and, according to officials in Bonn and in Brussels, through much of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization high command.

They expressed concern that Schlesinger's successor, presidential adviser Donald Rumsfeld—though a former NATO ambassador—would not be able to command the same professional respect for some time as the former U.S. defence chief and thus might not be able to keep the pressure on the NATO allies to maintain their defences in a period of economic uncertainty.

Ford's 'My Guys' Named In U.S. Cabinet Shakeup

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is changing personnel but not policy, saying a new team of "my guys" will continue on a course of peace and prosperity for the United States.

Ford announced the biggest shakeup of his administration Monday night in the top levels of defence and foreign policy. He also said that while Vice-President Nelson Rockefeller is dropping off the 1976 presidential election team, Rockefeller has promised to support his election bid.

The personnel changes included:

—James Schlesenger, who has frequently disagreed openly with State Secrttary Henry Kissinger over detente with the Soviet Union, is out as defence secretary. He will be replaced by Donald Rumsfeld, now White House staff chief.

Sources close to Ford say Rumsfeld will balance Kissinger's influence and that both will have equal access to Ford, though Pentagon officials say Rumsfeld will have to avoid being dominated by Kissinger.

—William Colby is fired as head of the CIA, to be replaced by George Bush, former Texas congressman, Republican national chairman, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations and now U.S. representative in Peking.

—Elliot Richardson, former attorney-general and current ambassador to Britain, is to become commerce secretary, his fourth cabinet post under two administrations. Senator Hubert Humphrey (Dem. Minn.) foresaw the move as adding Richardson's name to tht list of Republican vice-presidential possibilities.

Commerce Secretary Rogers Morton is returning to private life after the first of the year, but Ford says he will be calling on Morton for aid in the future, raising speculation about a campaign post.

Lt.-Gen. Brent Scowcroft, long-time Kissinger protege, succeeds his boss as chief of the NSC and as presidential adviser on national security. Some saw this as an effort to mute criticism that Kissinger wields too much power, but some of those Democratic critics maintain that Scowcroft's closeness to Kissinger means the secretary will still maintain effective control over the NSC.

—Richard Cheney, currently Rumsfeld's top deputy, will take over as chief of the White House staff. Little opposition was expected when the Senate takes up confirmation of Rumsfeld, Bush and Richardson. The jobs for Scowcroft and Cheney do not require confirmation.

GM Recalls Air-Bag Autos

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. is recalling 1,300 air bag-equipped cars in the U.S. because a defect might prevent the controversial safety device in the steering wheel from inflating in an accident.

The recall involves 1,300 of the 1,700 1975-model Oldsmobiles, Cadillacs and Buicks equipped with the $325 option.

GM sold 7,500 air bag-equipped cars in 1974 — the first year the option was offered — but has sold none this year.

Rocky Aided Ford Fight?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republicans, not including President Ford, are saying Vice-President Nelson Rockefeller's decision to drop out of the contest for nomination next year will help Ford beat Ronald Reagan next year.

Some of Rockefeller's partisans worried aloud abut the effect on GOP chances in the presidential election a year from now if Ford goes to the party's right wing for a 1976 running mate.

But the hard-headed political consehsus was that Reagan, the former California governor expected to challenge the president for the nomination, had taken a decided setback.

Ford declined to make any political value judgment about the Rockefeller decision, but made it clear during his news conference that he had neither encouraged the vice president to pull out nor pleaded with him to change his mind.

"The vice president came to me and said his letter represented his decision, And I accepted it," Ford said.

Nor would Ford concede he had any concern about Reagan or anyone else: "I'm not worried about any competitor, Democratic or Republican."

But others in the political trade said Ford did have problems with the former New York governor and party liberal as his most likely 1976 running mate and that the vice president had helped ease them by bowing out.

Reagan himself, declaring he was "astounded" by the action, conceded it would make the launching of a conservative challenge to Ford more difficult.

Reagan also said he is not interested in a vice presidential spot on the 1976 ticket.

Elite FBI Unit Tabs Terrorists

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A routine police report apparently has revealed the existence of a confidential new FBI anti-terrorist unit.

The FBA terrorism research and management staff was formed recently to gather information on terrorist tactics in the United States and abroad and to disseminate information to local police forces, the report said.

The Los Angeles Times reported today that FBI headquarters in Washington would not discuss the existence of the unit, other than to say, "We are active in the area" and that information about it given to Los Angeles police was supposed to be "semi-confidential."

The unit was mentioned in the department's routine bi-weekly report to the city council. Assistant police chief Daryl Gates referred to it in explaining a trip to Washington by the commanding officer of the uniformed services group, Cmdr. Frank Brittell.

In planning to protect visiting dignitaries, he said, the department "found it difficult to obtain first-hand information on the tactics used by terrorists throughout the world."

The need will be met in the future however, he said, because the FBI director of training has established the terrorism research staff to obtain tactical information on terrorists by dispatching FBI agents whenever a terrorist incident occurs," he said.

"The information obtained will then be disseminated to local law enforcement agencies."

Gates said that while in Washington, Brittell met with Robert Feary, identified as a special assistant to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger for combating terrorism. Feary, conceding "a communications gap in providing tactical information on terrorists' methods to local law enforcement agencies," said that U.S. embassies will gather data on terrorist tactics abroad for relay to American police forces, the report said.

Wrong Flies Died

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A crash program to wipe out the most serious fruit fly infestation in the United States has killed four million flies — the wrong ones.

"It's a setback, no doubt about that," county agriculture commissioner Paul Engler said Monday, bemoaning an error that caused the death of sterile flies meant to eradicate the pest.

State, local and federal officials are trying to wipe out the Mediterranean fruit fly, a dangerous pest which has established a small beachhead in Western Los Angeles. The fly, which destroys more than 200 kinds of fruits and vegetables, has never been a problem in California before and threatens a $700 million harvest.

Officials are saturating an 80-square mile area with fruit flies flown in from Hawaii, where they are sexually sterilized by exposure to radiation while still in the larva stage. By mating with the sterile flies, the wild flies produce no offspring, and in time should die out.

A shipment of 4 million fly pupae arrived Frida, were stored in a trailer and began to hatch Sunday.

But the would-be rescuers had short lives.

Viking Two Peters Out

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Months away from Mars and 10.7 million miles from Earth, the Viking 2 batteries are dead, the sapce agency said Monday.

The United States Space Agency has hurled two Vikings at Mars to look for life their next summer but a contemplated landing by the second may be scrubbed if its batteries cannot be charged.

The Viking 2 was launched Sept. 9 and due to land Aug. 7, one month after the landing planned for Viking 1.

GARDENING

Plant Cabbages, Sprouts Firmly

Cabbages and brussels sprouts must be planted firmly in a compact soil.

This statement is found in soome of the earliest treatises on gardening and is still one of the first instructions given to novices interested in growing vegetables.

It applies to most of the estimated 1800-plus species of herbaceous plants in the Family Cruciferae (cru-sif-er-ee) or Mustard Family, of which the genus Brassica is a member.

Close relatives frequently found in local gardens are the rockery plants Alyssum and Arabis; Cheiranthus, the wallflowers; Hesperis, Dame's Rocket; Iberis, candytuft; Lunaria, moonflower or honesty; Mathiola, stock; and a number of local wild plants that gardeners refer to as weeds.

The genus Brassica covers the Coles, mostly edible annual and biennial herbs such as Cabbage, Brussels sprouts, Broccoli, Cauliflower, Collards, Kale (borecole), Kohlrabi, Mustard, Chinese Cabbage, Rutabaga, and Turnip.

In the vegetable garden, those needing attention now are the fall, winter, and spring cabbage, Brussels-sprouts, and Kale. In the flower garden the same attention is needed by the Wallflowers for next year's flowering, newly planted Alyssum and Arabis, and the Brompton Stock.

All these plants need their roots in a well compacted soil if they are to make tight heads of leaves for eating, good new leaves for cooking (kale), or masses of flowers to brighten the garden.

Most of us do quite well with the cabbage, kale and sprouts during the late summer and early fall, in fact, until the October rains and November gales hit the garden.

The rain loosen the soil as storm after storm increase the amount of soil moisture, and this in turn lessens the holding power of the roots. Then the southeast winds blow the plants one way, the southwest that follow blow them the other way, and the roots are soon wrenched from their holdings.

As a result, cabbage heads become a mass of loose leaves, sprouts fail to make tight buttons, kale leaves turn yellow and the supply of new leaves diminishes.

To prevent these problems, the gardener has to make sure the roots do not become loose.

After the first rain the usual procedure is to stamp the soil tightly around each plant with the feet. As the soil gets more sticky the job is better done by tamping with the end of a 2 by 4.

By November most soils are too wet to walk on and quite unsuitable for tamping. This is when the dry compost put under cover in September comes in handy.

About two inches of compost is spread over the root area of each plant and then trampled or tamped firm. The same is done around the newly planted wallflowers and Brompton stock.

We still have two problems: one is cabbage that were not planted deep enough and now have large heads on one-foot stems rocking around in the wind instead of being close to the ground; the other is growing the tall varieties of Brussels-sprouts which were always susceptible to wind damage in coastal gardens.

To obtain a worthwhile crop in either case it pays to set stakes beside these plants and tie them securely to the stakes. This is a standard practice in the many coastal farms in southwestern England along the English Channel, and on their counterparts in the coastal areas of France.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale, start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford bring the desired results do so you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily. Monday through Saturday call:

Artist's Setbacks in Sport Taken Out on Charlie

By CHARLES M. SCHULZ

This is the second of five articles excerpted from the book "Peanuts Jubilee, My Life and Art With Charlie Brown and Others," published by Holt Rinehart and Winston. Because of the postal strike a number of favorite comics are missing for this week, but they'll be resumed when alternative delivery methods take effect.

There are certain seasons in our lives which each of us can recall, and there are others which disappear from our memories like the melting snow.

When I was 14, I had a summer which I shall always remember. We had organized our own neighborhood baseball team, but we never played on a strict schedule. for we didn't know when we could fine another team to play.

I lived about a block from a grade school called Maddocks in St. Paul where there was rather a large playground. The playground director that summer saw our interest in playing baseball and came up with the idea that we should organize four teams and have a summer league. Our team came in first place that year, probably because we practiced nore than the other teams, and one day I actually pitched a no-hit, no-run game. It was really a great summer.

I still think the challenges to be faced in sports work out marvelously as a caricature of the challenges that we face in the more serious aspects of our lives.

Any time I experience a crushing defeat in bowling, or have a bad night at bridge, or fail to qualify in the opening round of a golf tournament, I am able to transfer my frustrations to poor Charlie Brown.

The three years I spent in the Army taught me all I need to know about loneliness, and my sympathy for the loneliness that all of us experience is dropped heavily upon poor Charlie Brown.

I know what it is to have to spend days, evenings and weekends by myself, and I also know how uncomfortable anxiety can be. I worry about almost all there is in life to worry about, and because I worry, Charlie Brown has to worry.

When I was just out of high school, I started to submit cartoons to most of the major magazines — as all ambitious amateurs do — but received the ordinary rejection slips and no encouragement.

After the war, however, I set about in earnest to sell my work. I visited several places in the Twin Cities to try to get some job in whatever art department might be able to use my limited talents, but I was unsuccessful.

I was almost hired one day to letter tombstones, and was glad when the man did not call me back the next day for had already begun to worry what my friends might say when told them about my new job.

A short while later, I was hired by an art correspondence school. My job there was to correct some of the basic lessons, and it introduced me to a roomful of people who did much to affect my later life.

The head of the department was a famous magazine illustrator of that period. He was a perfectionist at drawing things as they appeared, and I believe he did much to inspire me. He taught me the importance of drawing accurately.

Almost everything I draw now, in what is sometimes a quite extreme style, is based on a real knowledge of how to draw that object, whether it be a shoe, a doghouse or a child's hand. Cartooning, after all, is simply good design.

Some of the people who worked at the correspondence school with me have remained friends all of these years, and I have used the names of several in the strip.

I recall perfectly the day he came over and first looked at the little cartoon face that had been named after him. "Is that what he looks like?" he said with dismay.

The character of Linus and friends of mine who were in-Frieda were also named after structors.

During this time I continued to mail my cartoons out to major newspaper syndicates. In the spring of 1950 I accumulated a batch of some of the better cartoons I had been drawing for the St. Paul paper and mailed them off to United Feature Syndicatt in New York City.

I don't know how much time went by without my hearing from them, but I'm sure it was at least six weeks.

Convinced that my drawings had been lost in the mail, I finally wrote them a letter describing the drawings I had sent and asking them if they could recall receiving anything similar. If not, I wanted to know so that I could put a tracer on the lost cartoons.

Instead, I received a very nice letter from their editorial director who said they were very interested in my work and would I care to come to New York and talk about it?

When I arrived at the syndicate offices early in the morning, no one other than the receptionist was there.

I had brought along a new comic strip I had been working on, rather than the panel cartoons which United Feature Syndicate had seen. I simply wanted to give them a better view of my work.

I told the receptionist that I had not had breakfast yet, so I would go out and eat and then return. When I got back to the syndicate offices they had already opened up the package I had left there and in that short time had decided they would rather publish the strip than the panel. This made me very happy, for I really preferred the strip myself.

I returned to Minneapolis filled with great hope for the future and asked a certain little girl to marry me. When she turned me down and married someone else, there was no doubt that Charlie Brown was on his way. Losers get started early.

NEXT: Growing Up With Charlie Brown.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

During the 1975 Summer National Championships held in Miami Beach, I phoned in a report to my home paper, The Wahsington Post, every day. I was always dictating the daily story to a girl who was not a bridge player. One day, after I had finished, she said: "Fine, Mr. Karpin, but what's a finesse?" I replied: "It's a situation where you take a chance, and 50 per cent of the time you'll be right." Said the young lady: "Those are much better odds than I'm used to. Maybe I should take up the game."

She was looking on at the bright side, of course, for when one takes a finesse, 50 per cent of the time she is wrong. Today's deal serves as a case in point. Sitting South was George Rapee, of New York.

Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

After the opening spade lead has been taken by South's ace, declarer cashed the king of trumps, after which he returned a trump towards the board's A-J. But he did not finesse the jack (had he done so, East would have won the trick with the queen and played back a trump. The four-heart contract would then have been defeated). Instead he won the second trump lead with dummy's ace, leaving only the high queen of trumps outstanding.

Next came a low club, South putting up the king, with West capturing the trick with the ace. West returned the diamond queen, which was taken by dummy's king. The board's remaining club was then led, South winning with his queen and returning a low club, which he ruffed with dummy's jack. East overruffed with the queen.

East exited with his last diamond, the trick being won by dummy's ace. Next came the jack of spades, which was taken by East's king. With nothing but spades left in his hand, East had no option but to paly a spade (the nine) to dummy's high ten. On this trick South discarded his remaining low club.

By playing the hand as he did — spurning the finesse in trumps — South's only losers were a spade, a club and a trump.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Wednesday, Nov. 5, 1975

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): You learn a secret. This aids in your creative output. You're more able to publish, to advertise, to distribute, to bridge language differences. Highlight flexibility, versatility, willingness to improvise—and travel. Gemini, Sagittarius could be in picture.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): Money, details, thorough approach to problem affecting partner, mate—these are spotlighted. Refuse to be "painted into corner." You are capable of perceiving beneath surface. You know what is true—key is to base actions on knowledge.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): Accent on binding agreement. Don't become involved in situation which drains time away from all creative projects. Emphasize balance. Refuse to affix signature to document which robs you of individuality. You'll understand!

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): Avoid attempting to "doctor" yourself. Means obtain expert, professional treatment. Be realistic. Value your own well-being. Keep medical, dental appointments —for your own ultimate welfare. Taurus, Libra persons figure prominently.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Romantic haze could be blocking a clear view. Know it and protect yourself in clinches. Steer clear of extravagant, grandiose schemes. One who promises something for nothing is whistling in dark. Stick to principles. Welcome love, not sensationalism.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): You close deal, get assurances, improve prospects. You do business in sense that you have something of value —and others are willing to pay and negotiate for it. Capricorn, Cancer figure in picture. You can deal from position of strength. Know it and be confident.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Draw line between valid concept and fantasy. Stick with workable ideas. Let go of past so that you can enter "future". You'll comprehend. Aries is involved. Accent on relative in transit who wants you to perform a special service, favor.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Hold off on speculative investments. Means some commodities could be taking a nose dive. You do best now by applying brakes. If you wait, it is possible that you can obtain what you seek at a lower price. It's possible!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Cycle high—you come to terms with older, obstinate person. You'll land on your feet. Your position is stronger than might be apparent on surface. Trust your judgement, intuition. You're on right track! See people as they are, not through haze of wishful thinking.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): You could be subject of clandestine meeting. Realize that all is not out in open. Be positive that "your side" is represented. Social contacts are more important than usual. You need people to talk for you, to sing your praises, to assert your worth. Turn on charm!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Friends and finances could make a deceptive mixture. Be sure of facts—don't bend truth for any person's apparent advantage. If you play by the rules, benefits accrue to those who care for you. Know it and act accordingly.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): You have chance to elevate position. Your mark is made, style defined. Gemini, Virgo persons figure prominently. Analyze situation. Refuse to accept surface indications. Dig for information and synthesize it.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY You are intense, passionate, fond of travel, a good reporter-teacher, a person who knows how to wear clothes and one who appreciates good food. June was significant—travel shown in December. Gemini, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. You are due to shake off emotional bruises. You're on the way back!

Right away you can see what digit the letter B must represent. That tells you the possibles for the value of the letter A, and thence for N and M. Very little trial should give you the value of this BOMB.

Weather, Mail Strike Pose Vote Barriers

Few Set For Big Campaign

None of the eight island constituencies has a full slate of candidates and some have no declared candidates at all, except for incumbent MLAs.

The appointment of a commission of inquiry into the redistribution of electoral boundaries in the province caused many riding committees to delay their nomination meetings until after any changes were made in the constituency boundaries.

There will be at least a four-way race for two Social Credit nominations in the city of Victoria.

City alderman Bob Ellis today confirmed the "lively rumor" he will be seeking the nomination is true. Ellis said he would make "an official declaration in a day or two."

Incumbent SC MLA Newell Morrison confirmed he will be seeking renomination. Businessman Ian Rendle and lawyer George Jones earlier declared their intentions of seeking the Socred nominations in Victoria.

Morrison said the nomination meeting will be held at 7 p.m., Nov. 18 at the McPherson Playhouse with former attorney-general Robert Bonner acting as chairman.

"We know it's a little late," Morrison said, "But we didn't want to confuse people. By that time the municipal elections (Nov. 15) will be over."

Gordon Hanson, a 32-year-old administrative assistant in the consumer services Department, announced today he will seek the NDP nomination at a meeting likely to be held next week.

Hanson said he expects three or four other people will also seek the nomination. Community worker Charles Barber has long been considered a possible nominee.

All four B.C. political parties shifted into election planning Monday in the face of two major stumbling blocks.

The postal strike will make campaigning tough and December weather will make voting difficult in outlying districts.

"It's an incredible political blunder," said Social Credit party president Peter Hyndman.

"What a way to run a government and what a way to call an election," he said. "Why but Barrett would call an election during a postal strike and who but Barrett would call the latest election so people will have to trudge through snow and rain and sleet?"

The Dec. 11 election will be the latest ever in B.C. history.

But Hyndman, who said he will definitely not run himself although he would like to be a candidate, said the Socreds' election machinery is ready.

Only one candidate — Rafe Mair in Kamloops — has been nominated so far but Hyndman said more meetings will take place this week and 55 candidates should be elected within two weeks.

Preliminary work on advertising has been done but Hyndman said the party has not decided how much to spend.

Opposition leader Bill Bennett said in Kelowna that Barrett called the election out of fear of the NDP record while in office.

He said the government has depleted the B.C. treasury and brought about heavy unemployment.

Bennett said he welcomed the election, but said it is unfortunate that electoral redistribution has not already taken place.

"I predict that the people of this province are not prepared to be fooled anymore," he said. "The people are ready for honesty, they are ready for sincerity, they are prepared to have it told like it is.

"I predict that our party will be elected with a strong majority government which will be needed in the difficult times ahead."

The Socreds, with 35,000 members, will rely on individual contact by door-to-door canvassers, said Hyndman.

NDP president Yvonne Cocke was less surprised by the announcement but said the party's advertising campaign has not been worked out.

The postal strike will be a problem, she said, and the winter election will mean all four parties will have to work on getting people out to vote.

But Cocke said she didn't think the late date will mean more people will be disenfranchised because the usual August-September elections always disenfranchise a large segment of people on holidays or working away for the summer.

"I will predict that we will come out with a victory, although with a slightly reduced majority," she said.

Mrs. Cocke, wife of Health Minister Dennis Cocke, said the party is "as ready as it has ever been" to fight an election.

"There may be a shifting of vote," she said. "I think we are doing very well in the rural areas."

40 Booths For Vote Registration

Forty registration booths will be set up in the Greater Victoria area for electors to get on the voters' list for the provincial election before the Wednesday, Nov. 12 deadline.

Location of the 40 booths should be ready for publication in the Times Wednesday evening and it will be up to all electors to ensure they are registered.

Between 75 and 80 per cent of voters in the province are already properly registered but anyone who has moved into a constituency or become eligible to vote since the 1972 provincial election will not be on the list.

Those people will have to make their own arrangements to go to a registration desk before next Wednesday.

Postal Talks Down to Cash

OTTAWA (CP) — Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey said today that all but monetary issues have been resolved following an all-night session of talks between the union and post office.

The talks were adjourned at about 5:30 a.m. EST and were to continue a 12:30 p.m. today.

The postmaster-general said he was pleased with the results of Monday night's meeting, but added:

"I don't want to make any predictions — we're still a far way from a settlement."

Both Mackasey and Jean-Claude Parrot, the chief negotiator for the 22,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW), had appeared optimistic when they entered the night bargaining session at about 10 p.m.

Mackasey had said, on leaving for a short recess just before 1 a.m. that the session he had just left was "the most fruitful two hours I've enjoyed in a long time."

The night session was the third of the day.

Some observers believed the so-called casual clause was the only one really remaining to be settled in detail, along with the issue of electronic surveillance.

Both sides already had agreed in principle the use of casual labor is necessary for smooth post office operation at certain times. What had to be settled was when those times would be and under what conditions casual workers would be employed.

The money issue is relatively clear cut.

Mackasey has maintained since well before the strike started 15 days ago that there is no more money available than the $1.70-an-hour increase recommended in the conciliation report brought down by Judge Jean Moisan of the Quebec Superior Court.

About 30 CUPW rushed in at 8:30 a.m. and took over the Western post office headquarters as part of a continuing dispute over non-receipt of last month's pay cheques. They want the cheques made available on neutral grounds.

In Montreal, a spokesman for the 4,500 striking postal workers said they have organized an intra-city mail delivery service to compensate for the loss of regular service.

Letters will be hand-delivered anywhere on Montreal Island for $1.25 each, said Guy Senecal, vice-president of the Montreal local.

But in Halifax, striking CUPW members heckled police and unemployed letter carriers today as a new courier service began its second day of operation.

"We're here to protect the CUPW workers from scab courier services," said Darrell Tingley, Atlantic representative of the CUPW, which has been on strike against the post office for three weeks.

ANGRY INSIDE workers picket interim mail service set up Monday in Halifax by out of work letter carriers. Protest finally forced cancellation of the scheme only hours after it went into effect.

CTC Slashes B.C. Tel Bid

OTTAWA (CP) — Applying the full weight of the government's new anti-inflation guides, the Canadian transport commission cut $6.7 million Monday from a British Columbia Telephone Co. request for higher revenues.

The decision reduced by 28 per cent the company's request for an extra $23.7 million next year.

In the first price and profits ruling affecting a government-regulated industry since Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau announced the restraints Oct. 13, the commission said it had no choice but to order the company to scale down expected 1976 revenues to $434.1 million from $440.8 million.

The company's 1.5 million subscribers will still pay more for telephone service starting Jan. 1 but the amount of the scaled-down increase must still be calculated.

The commission said the wage-price restraints might lead to a serious deterioration in British Columbia telephone service and that the restraints were not sensitive to the requirements of public utilities.

The unanimous decision by a three-member panel headed by commission vice-president Guy Roberge, included disallowance of $1.5 million in proposed salary increases in excess of the wage guides for company employees not covered by union contracts.

The commission was in the final stages of editing a 39-page decision which would have given B.C. Telephone an increase of 9.8 per cent on most services but only 5.4 per cent on basic monthly residential telephone rates when the wage-price restraints were imposed.

The increases would have added $23.7 million to the company's 1976 revenues but after assessing the impact of the guides the commission reduced the amount to $17 million.

The commission made clear its dissatisfaction with the restraint program and said it would restore the full increase to B.C. Telephone if the company can win an exemption from the restraints from the newly appointed federal anti-inflation board.

The commission also warned of a possible "serious deterioration of telephone service" in British Columbia.

Spy Charge 'Surprise' To Police

Victoria police union president Sgt. Pat Braiden said today he was taken "totally by surprise" by allegations made by a Tory MP Monday that the Canadian Armed Forces security division was spying on police associations, including the association here.

Conservative MP Eldon Woolliams (Calgary North) said in the House of Commons that he was told two Armed Forces members had carried out an investigation of the Saskatchewan Federation of Police Associations in Regina and the Calgary Police Association.

He said outside the House a similar incident took place in Victoria alluding to someone taking "something from inside or outside a hall and disappearing with it."

Woolliams said the investigations appeared designed to get information about the possibility of a police strike and the attitudes of police associations with respect to capital punishment.

Police associations throughout Canada, including the one in Victoria, have threatened to stage a four-hour sit-down protest if the federal cabinet continues with its practice of commuting death penalties.

Braiden said as far as he knew no armed forces' member has infiltrated the Victoria association's meetings.

He added, however: "We're not naive. We know who we're dealing with and what to look out for."

Meanwhile defence minister James Richardson, who replied he know nothing of the incidents raised by the MP, said he would make inquiries.

$30,000 JOBS CUT

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada has eliminated 23 senior marketing positions in Montreal as part of company cutbacks to curb losses incurred during one of its worst economic years, an airline spokesman said Monday.

The marketing executives involved, some earning $30,000 a year, have not been fired and there will be an effort made to find them other jobs," the spokesman said.

"But they have been told that their jobs no longer exist and if no new employment can be found within the company, some financial settlement will have to be made."

The executives, some with more than 27 years' service with Air Canada, were developing marketing plans to minimize the effects on the airline of the current recession at the time their jobs were eliminated.

The crown corporation spokesman said he could not give accurate figures on how many executives had lost their jobs so far this year, "but it is quite a number."

The spokesman said that "marketing is not the first, nor will it be the last department to be hit" by the airline's cutbacks.

Spanish Army on Full Alert

MADRID (AP) — Spain put its army in the Spanish Sahara on full alert today as it sought to avoid armed conflict with Morocco by negotiating in Madid.

More skirmishes were reported between Moroccan troops and desert tribesmen opposing Morocco's claim to the phosphate-rich territory on her southern border.

News reports from the Spanish Sahara said the army has been confirmed to quarters on full alert and that the territory was under martial law. A dusk-to-dawn curfew has been in force since last week.

Moroccan Premier Ahmed Osman, sent to Madrid Monday by his brother-in-law, King Hassan II, put off his return to Morocco to allow for a second day of talks today.

Osman met for more than five hours Monday with the acting chief of state, Prince Juan Carlos, and with Premier Carlos Arias Navarro.

Wage Hikes Lower In Quarter

OTTAWA (CP) — Collective agreements settled in the third quarter of 1975 show a lower rate of wage increase than those in the second quarter, labor department figures indicated Monday.

Of 114 settlements during the third quarter, the average annual increase in base rates was 16.8 per cent in compound terms. The comparable figure for the second quarter was 18.5 per cent.

The figures are based on an analysis of collective agreements covering 500 or more workers in industries other than construction.

Of the total settlements, 35 provided for a cost-of-living allowance (COLA) and the average increase was 11.2 per cent excluding the COLA clause. The remaining 79 settlements provided for an average 19.4 per cent increase.

Secret Nuclear Meetings

LONDON (AP) — Diplomats of seven nuclear-exporting countries, including Canada, today opened secret meetings on new safeguards against the spread of materials which may lead to new nuclear weapons stockpiles.

They conferred at the foreign office under strict secrecy. Their British hosts and their own embassies refused to disclose any details.

However, informants who insisted on anonymity said the two-day meeting will be devoted in part to an examination of recent or pending sales of nuclear technology and plants to countries which so far have no nuclear capacity.

These diplomats have met in London secretly on seveal occasions this year. They include senior representatives of the United States, Canada, Britain, the Soviet Union, West Germany, France and Japan.

The session got under way amid controversy over a series of deals including West Germany's mid-1975 sale to Brazil of nuclear reactors and fuel processing and enrichment plant to complete the nuclear fuel cycle.

B.C. Fed Boss $200 Above Guides

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

VANCOUVER — Probably the quickest round of salary negotiations in B.C. labor history was settled today at the B.C. Federation of Labor convention, raising secretary-treasurer Len Guy's salary — to $200 above federal wage controls.

The 700 convention delegates in about two minutes voted to hike Guy's wages from $450 to $500 a week or $2,600 a year, symbollically $200 above the guidelines which the federation has vowed to fight.

The federation does not come under the guidelines which imposed the wage controls on Canadian organizations with more than 500 employees the federation has about 125,000 members or employers, but only about 15 employees.

The salary hike and another resolution upping the per capita dues of federation affiliates by two cents per month passed easily but another motion trying to separate the positions of the federation's elected officers from federation staff did not fare so well.

The motion, sponsored by the B.C. Government Employees Union, would have prohibited an elected officer of the federation from becoming an employee of the federation during his term of office.

The issue centred around assistant secretary-treasurer John Squire, also a vice-president of the federation. Squire was elected at the last convention but was appointed to a full-time federation position earlier this year.

BCGEU general secretary John Fryer said the appointment had set a dangerous precedent. He said a situation could develop where the six elected vice-presidents would all end up on the federation payroll and "sit around making recommendations on our own salaries."

Debate on the motion threatened to break down into an issue of support or non-support for the federation executive.

A carpenters' union delegate said the motion was an "underhanded way" of getting at the leaders.

The constitution committee under whose jurisdiction the resolution fell, recommended non-concurrence with the motion and delegates supported that stand with only the BCGEU contingent opposed.

TOWN TALK

To the 1,537 people who sat for 192 days (at three hours each) in the Royal Theatre last night soaking up Bucky Fuller: Don't be surprised hat an 80-year-old man kept you all up past bedtime.

Before delivering his cosmic opera, and demonstrating his geodesic Tinker Toys, Fuller (who comes across like a mind-blown Leo Nimsick) took a long nap. And, says Mene Brereton lecture series promoter Charles Barber, the old gent eats maybe four or five meals a day.

Before the talk Fuller dined at Antonio's with Dave and Shirley Barrett who sat onstage — with Bucky and the premier winding up the night in a bear hug of mutual admiration. Afterwards at Smitty's, Fuller was visibly pleased to be the object of much hugging, handshaking and autograph hunting.

He'll be back in May after William F. Buckley, Linus Pauling, John Kenneth Galbraith and Ralph Nader — all confirmed for the Brereton series.

Knock, knock. Who's there? You just never know, as this story going the rounds proves once again.

A local woman answered a knock at her door one rainy morning last month to find a couple, strangers to her, standing there.

"I'm Paul Newman," said the man, "and this is my wife Joanne. Could I use your phone to call a taxi?" Seems they had been out for a walk and got caught in the rain.

The woman agreed but then had some second thoughts, so the story goes, about having these strangers in her house. So she asked them to wait on the porch. That fellow's steely blue eyes didn't ring any bell of recognition.

So Butch Cassidy rode off in a cab with his talented wife, Joanne Woodward. And all movie buffs who dream of such an encounter got stung.

Mayor Peter Pollen found himself in a brush with the law, both inside and outside the Imperial Inn last week.

While Pollen, the chairman of the Victoria police board, was testifying at an arbitration hearing on the pay hassle between the city and its police department (arguing, as usual, that city policemen shouldn't be paid as much as they want to be paid), a city official rushed in, interrupted the proceedings and asked for the keys to the mayor's car.

The illegally parked vehicle was about to be towed away, he explained.

A short while late the official returned with the keys. His fortuitous intervention had saved Pollen the tow-away fine. But he was clutching one of those familiar little scraps of paper — a parking ticket!

Yes, but what's a diener?

It's a European title applied to pathology assistants which has become common in Canadian hospitals in recent years, explains Mike O'Brien, director of employee relations.

All of which caused Dr. Welchmann Billung-Meyer, the hospital's chief of staff, to chuckle when the board approved the move last week. He's not sure the title will do anything for labor-management relations because diener translates simply as "servant."

MacPherson probably won't mind. It means greater responsibilities and an increase in salary.

Looks as if Saanich and Oak Bay police stations are going to be busy for a couple of Saturdays, booking in scores of young bookworms.

It's no sudden increase in juvenile crime, but a program for youngsters aged nine to 13 laid on by the Greater Victoria public library.

Library spokesman Pat Murphy says the idea is for the kids to meet at the libraries — the Oak Bay branch Nov. 15 at 12:30 p.m.; the Saanich-Victoria (Town and Country) branch Nov. 29 at 2 p.m. — and then stroll to the police stations to see how real live cops operate.

They'll see the police radio in action, be fingerprinted . . . and no doubt ask lots of questions.

★ ★ ★

One can only wonder what Attorney-General Alex Macdonald — a man well known for his wry sense of humor — had in mind when he approved a menu for a luncheon his department gave to delegates to the Pacific Northwest Organized Crime Conferec at The Empress last Wedesday.

The entree was "poached" salmon, B.C.'s finest. Not a complaint was heard from the hungry crimefighters.

Whether Canada should have a heroin maintenance program is a conundrum in which politicians and senior civil servants do not enjoy wallowing.

But the question comes up every now and then, and they're forced to make some response.

Last week it was posed to deputy attorney-general David Vickers.

No, he hasn't changed his mind, he said. He's still skeptical it would be effective and besides it would be totally unworkable unless it was initiated at the federal level.

Two minutes later reporters came across federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde.

What are his views on heroin maintenance?

He hasn't changed his mind either. He doesn't think it would work and besides such a program would be a provincial responsibility, so why ask him?

When told Vickers had just said the impetus would have to come from the feds, Lalonde replied in his clear and clipped French accent:

"Sounds like a case of buck-passing to me."

Truck drivers, customs officers and other habitues of the "breakfast club," who have been gathering at the Princess Mary Restaurant's coffee shop for 20 years, are going to have to get used to a new look.

Closed for renovations, the coffee shop is expected to open next week, the counters removed and replaced with tables and new carpeting.

A restaurant spokesman said removal of the counters is necessary to get a licence to serve liquor and wine. Breakfast club members, like Sandy Ormiston, insist they prefer the old look of the coffee shop, which first was used as a canteen for the shipyard employees of "Mr. Tugboat," the late Harold B. Elworthy, who bought the old ship and converted her into a restaurant.

Here Today Gone Tomorrow

It was a time for carrying rather than wearing sweaters today as temperature climbed to 19, warmest November day locally in more than 30 years. Deborah Beach and Keith Gage-Cole gave two-year-old Terra Hanna a swinging ride down the breakwater at Ogden Point to mark the occasion while dog named India was left panting. Some sun is forecast for Wednesday but with it traditional November will be back with predicted temperature of 12.

Centennial Tree Decor For the Birds

When the idea was conceived several months ago by Mayor Peter Pollen it sounded simple, attractive and fairly inexpensive: merely stringing a few lights from half a dozen trees in Centennial Square.

But that was before the engineers and lighting experts got into the act.

Today they presented their estimate of the total costs — capital expenditure totalling $28,000 plus hydro costs of about $9,600 a year.

Result? End of idea.

Faced with a bill of that magnitude, the city's public works committee decided that arboreal adornment was strictly for the birds.

The main snag was that the extra power load would have meant installing new power lines and feeders to the six trees, with "outlets and breakers" on each of the adjacent lamp standards.

Cost for that little item alone was estimated at $20,000.

In addition, the city would have had to pay $2,000 for 6,000 lamps and 300 strings; $4,000 for replacement lamps (burning out at the rate of once every three months); and $2,000 for installation and labor costs.

Oh yes, and hydro costs would have been $800 a month based on an eight-hour daily lighting up period.

The committee instructed officials to examine costs involved in erecting a Christmas tree, the former tradition which was abandoned on economy grounds last year.

City engineer John Sansom was also asked to come up with ideas for titivating the Government Street Mall for the Yuletide season.

College Stalls Tuition Hike

Camosun College will shelve its proposed tuition fee increase for students until budget discussions are held later this month, council decided Monday night.

Council agreed to wait until there is clarification of community college budget guidelines announced last week by Education Minister Eileen Dailly which hold budget increases to 15 per cent.

Proposed tuition increases "to straighten out inequities" would have raised to $300 tuition for academic technical and vocational students, said college principal Dr. Grant Fisher.

Fisher drew up an alternative proposal at the meeting which would have maintained academic tuition at $250 a year and brought vocational students, now paying $150 a year in line with their counterparts. But councillors felt a tuition change which could be further altered by budget considerations would not be fair to students.

The principal said he was "annoyed" that Dailly had seen fit to step in and dictate budget decisions for community colleges.

Parents Protest Closure

A parents meeting has been called to protest the Greater Victoria school board's proposal to close Burnside Elementary school next June.

Part of an "older schools" policy, the board intends to channel the current 180 students in Grades 1 to 7 to nearby Tolmie, Blanshard and Tillicum elementary schools.

The parents' meeting starts at 7:30 p.m. at the Burnside gym and school board representatives are expected to attend.

Bikeway Bucks Abound

With any luck at all senior government grants and programs will bear most of the estimated cost of $42,500 for developing Victoria's portion of the proposed regional bikeway system, city aldermen were told today.

City engineer John Sansom informed the public works committee that prospects appear reasonable for nearly $36,000 of the total bill to be financed by the Capital Improvement District Commission, the province's community recreational facilities fund and the Local Initiatives program.

The committee, meanwhile, endorsed traffic officials' proposal to construct a portion of the special route for bicyclists on the proposed northward extension of Vancouver from Pandora to Caledonia, at an estimated cost of $6,000.

Land for the highway extension has been acquired over a period of several years, but the city has decided that instead of pushing the artery through to Saanich it will serve more as a downtown bypass route.

Instead of the original 46-foot width required, therefore, only 33 feet will be needed for two lanes of traffic.

Traffic division chief Derek Wild explained that this would allow room for a five-foot-wide landscaped area and a four-foot-wide bicycle path.

The path will "meander" through the boulevard to provide variety and cut down on two-wheeled speeding.

Major Housing Developments Clear Hurdle

The first official step toward two new major apartment developments in Saanich were taken at Monday's council meeting.

Three readings of a bylaw were passed, declaring the San Sebastian Motel and Victoria Auto Court properties on the Gorge a development area.

An application by J. A. Traunweiser envisions 212 units, predominantly apartments, being built on the nine-acre site.

Ald. Sandy Noel suggested the bylaw readings be fabled until a study of sewer services in the area is completed.

He and the rest of council were told by municipal engineer Cliff Warren that the study would be complete in 30 days.

Municipal planner Gil Laurenson said the developers hoped to proceed as soon as the necessary services are available. He added in a deal worked out with Saanich, frontage on the Gorge would be given to the municipality as a greenbelt area.

On the recommendation of Laurenson, the council also agreed to take the necessary action to make a 10-acre site on Lucas Avenue a development area.

Laurenson said architect John Di Castri proposes to build 101 units of attached housing, ranging from two to four bedrooms, and a centrally located social centre on the site.

"The density of the project would be 10 units to the acre, which is moderate for attached housing use, and the project is professionally designed and would be well located," Laurenson told council.

Illegal Killing Nets $100 Fine

Birth, of 5062 West Saanich, pleaded guilty to the charge under the Stock Brands Act after officials found nine beef carcasses, four pork sides and two lamb carcasses on the premises Sept. 30.

He admitted to police he had slaughtered five animals in the past 10 days.

"The meat was not for sale. It was for the farmers' own use," Birch told the court.

Police said nearby residents had told the meat inspector they had contracted with Birch to "custom kill, hang, cut and wrap" their meat.

Birch told the court he had been warned about the same offence one year ago, so Judge William Ostler levied the maximum fine.

Bar for Sports, Not Tipplers

Aldermen endorsed the philosophy that the lounge is open on an interim basis to provide adult users of the sports complex with bar facilities 6-11:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 6-12 Friday.

It is only for those who actually use the centre themselves, or who take a member of their family to an activity in the centre, Mayor Brian Smith said.

This policy will be reviewed in the new year, he said.

Meanwhile a policy is being developed for booking the lounge by organizations.

In a related matter, council upset a recommendation by finance committee that residents of Goldsmith Street adjoining the recreation centre be given a one-time pass to the centre in recognition of the inconvenience caused during construction and with heavy traffic since the opening.

Residents had asked for a two-year pass for each person, since the construction had taken two years and they will be bothered with traffic and parking problems into the future.

Committee had been afraid of setting a precedent that would be claimed by people living adjacent to other community recreation facilities, and agreed with the token pass for a single admission.

Ald. Douglas McLelland said he could not agree with the request or the recommended solution. He said a three-month pass would be more appropriate.

He was supported by Ald. Douglas Watts, who said, "If we are going to do anything we should do something worthwhile."

$600 Boost for Council

Oak Bay council embraced federal wage-price guidelines, and in the next breath moved to raise salaries of mayor and aldermen by $600 Monday night.

On a motion by Ald. Douglas Watts council adopted the wage restraint formula limiting raises to 10 per cent a year, except where there are anomalies such as a worker getting more than his supervisor. The vote was unanimous.

Mayor Brian Smith then said council indemnities had not been adjusted since February 1972 and other areas were paying more than Oak Bay, mentioning Esquimalt particularly.

He said there should be aldermanic raises now that employee negotiations were well behind them, but he disagreed that they should be paid more every year.

The next raise should be approximately to the level of Esquimalt, he suggested or $600 including $200 expense money. That will make annual salary $3,000.

SAANICH AWARDED Donna Lawrence, 15 of 5217 Beckton, a special commendation Monday for putting to practice what she had learned at a fire department course for babysitters. The citation acknowledges her alertness when fire broke out in a home at 5198 Lochside Oct. 25. She smelled smoke, discovered a fire in the rumpus room and led Cheryl Andrews, 5 and Larry Andrews, 7, to safety in a nearby home where she notified firemen.
